The First Sunday.

The opening sermon of the collegiate year was preached Sunday in Battell chapel by Professor Ladd on the text: "For none of us liveth to himself, and no man dieth to himself."

In the evening Dean Wright talked to the students at the general meeting in Dwight Hall. He emphasized the necessity of absolute honesty at all times, suggested the great opportunities for usefulness that a college life opened for one, dwelt on the value of the constant forming and streng hening of a good character, and the wisdom of taking a positive stand in matters religious and moral.

The meeting of the Freshman classes held immediately after brought a very large number together. A great deal of interest in religious work was shown.

Reception to Freshmen in Dwight Hall.

A reception to the members of the Academic and Scientific Freshman classes was given in Dwight Hall last Friday evening by the University Young Men's Christian Association and proved a decided success. Music was furnished by quartets from the University Glee and Banjo Clubs and light refreshments were served. In the absence of President Dwight, Professor Henry P. Obituary.

HON. ALFRED HEBARD, '32.

Hon. Alfred Hebard, '32, died after a protracted illness at New London, Conn., on Monday, September 21. He was born at Windham, Conn., May 10, 1810. On leaving college he engaged in teaching at the Edgehill Seminary, Princeton, N. J., and two years later took charge of a boy's school at New London, Conn. After about two years more of service as a teacher, he went west, and was engaged in railroad engineering in Indiana. The following year he gave up this occupation, started westward, and settled in southern Iowa, near Burlington. He was one of the earliest settlers in that part of the country.

In 1841, Mr. Hebard married Miss Anne M. Huntington of New London, Conn. They had four children. From 1853 he engaged in the construction of railroads for several years. During the Civil War he was employed in maintaining lines of railway in southern Missouri and Tennessee. After the war he became a member of several of the first Legislatures of the new State of Iowa. About 1869 Mr. Hebard settled himself permanently at Red Oak, Montgomery County, Iowa. In 1875 he was elected to the State Senate, being re-elected again in 1879. He was one of the two United States Commissioners from Iowa to the Paris Exposition.

PROF. JOSIAH DWIGHT WHITNEY, '39.

The death of Professor Josiah D. Whitney, '39, occurred at New London, N. H., August 19. He had been Sturgis-Hooper Professor of Geology and Metallurgy at Harvard since 1865 and was a prominent member of the American Association and of the National Academy of Science.

Professor Whitney was born in Northampton, Mass., November 23, 1819. After leaving Yale he devoted himself to the study of chemistry, minerology and geology at Philadelphia and elsewhere in this country, and spent nearly five years abroad as a pupil of the School of Mines in Paris and at the Universities of Berlin and Giessen. Returning in 1847 he commenced the geological survey of the Lake Superior region under the authority of the United States Government, completing it in 1851. He also was engaged in the surveys of Iowa and Wisconsin and had made explorations in at least twenty-five states. Complete reports of his surveys have been published by him from time to time. In 1854 he published a work on "The Metallic Wealth of the United States." He was unmarried. The burial took place at Northampton, Mass.

DR. PETER COLLIER, '61.

Peter Collier, Ph. D., '61, died at Ann Arbor, Mich., on June 29, last. He was born at Chittenaugo, N. Y., August 17, 1835, and after graduating from Yale in '61, entered the Sheffield Scientific School, where he devoted himself to the study of chemistry. For several years he was assistant in the laboratory. In 1867 he removed to Burlington, Vt., having been appointed Professor of Chemistry, Mineralogy and Metallurgy, in the University of Vermont. Four years later he was elected Secretary of the State Board of Agriculture, Mining and Manufactures, and Dean of the Medical Faculty of the University, which conferred upon him the degree of M. D.

Dr. Collier was a member of the United States Scientific Commission appointed by President Grant to visit the International Exposition at Vienna in 1873. He resigned his professorship in the University of Vermont in
