Prize Examinations in Sacred Literature.

The American Institute of Sacred Literature of Chicago offers for the year 1896-97 six prizes for the best examinations in Hebrew, New Testament, Greek and the English Bible. The examinations are open to all college men and women of the United States and Canada, and the prizes to be awarded are $100 for the best paper and $50 for the second best paper in each of the three subjects mentioned. The names of the successful contestants and of the institutions with which they are connected will be published in the secular and religious press of the United States and Canada.

The purpose of the Institute in offering these examinations is chiefly to induce college students to obtain a working knowledge of Hebrew and New Testament Greek, together with an adequate biblical instruction so that data may be procured by which to convince the vast number of colleges in which the departments are not included, that it is important to add to their intellectual equipment, facilities for the best work in these subjects. Should the results of the examinations warrant their continuance, prizes will be offered annually.

No entrance fee whatever is required. The examination in the English Bible is open to all college students and those in Hebrew and New Testament Greek to all students as well as to those who enter the first year class of a Theological Seminary in the Autumn of 1897, provided such students are college men or women whose graduation took place not earlier than June, 1896. The privilege is reserved of withdrawing one or all of these examinations should an insufficient number of candidates apply.

All three examinations will be held on March 10, 1897, in whatever institute each candidate may be located. The names of candidates for any or all of these examinations may be enrolled at once, but will not be received after January 1, 1897, except by special permission of the principal of the American Institute, Dr. William R. Harper. The prizes will be awarded in June, 1897.

For forms of application and announcements, inquiries should be made of the American Institute of Sacred Literature, Hyde Park, Chicago, Ill. As there is no income to the Institute from this work the courtesy of return postage will be appreciated.
