PRINCETON 22—YALE 8.

An Overwhelming Score in the Decisive Ball Game.

The third and decisive game in the Yale-Princeton base ball series was played at Manhattan Field, New York City, Saturday, June 19, Princeton winning by the score of 22 to 8. Such an overwhelming defeat for Yale was received as a great surprise by every one, even the most sanguine of the Princeton supporters. It was perhaps the greatest surprise to the Yale players themselves. Every thing that had been counted on as sure parted most unpectedly. Not only was Fearey ineffective and unsteady in the box, the contrast to his performance at Princeton the week previous, but Fincke, Keator, Greenway and Goodwin, all made bad errors at critical points, and the team as a whole was unable to find Jayne's curves with any thing like the ease shown at the other two games. In the first case the game was won off his delivery and in the second he was batted out of the box after five innings. Last Saturday he pitched the entire game allowing only 9 hits with a total of 15 bases, struck out 9 men and gave 6 men first on balls.

An extended analysis of both Princeton games, already in type, must be reserved for the next issue, in which the record and history will be made complete. Late news has forced this.

The Golf Cup.

In the accompanying illustration are shown a few trophies in solid silver, for various sports, recently made by Theodore B. Starr, Silversmith and Jeweler, of 206 Fifth Avenue, New York. Alumni readers will note among them the handsome Ardsley Cup,—that on the left of the large punch bowl,—which was won by the Yale team in the Intercollegiate Golf match a few weeks since and which will make a welcome addition to the Yale trophy room.

Game at Princeton.

The Yale nine went to Princeton Saturday, June 12, and was defeated by the nine of that University in a game of much heavy hitting, and considerable loose playing. The score was 16 to 8; but, in spite of that, Yale made within one of as many hits as Princeton and was far superior in fielding. Yale's great weakness was in her pitchers, who gave frequent bases on balls, and allowed many bases to be stolen. Princeton had better success in bunching her hits than Yale and her base-runners seemed better able to make progress after having reached first base.

You found about what you wanted with us while you were in New Haven. We have just as good things and better now. And you can get them, wherever you are. A great many of your classmates do. We might mention a lot of good names, but you know who our customers were.

Well, if you want a string tie or a wedding outfit, a collar button, a dressing sack, a blanket wrap or a dress suit case, drop us a line. We have, by the way, something mighty pretty in colored shirtings for the spring and summer. You know our address:—

Time of the Race.

The Yale-Harvard-Cornell University boat race will be rowed down stream on the afternoon of Friday, June 25th, the start being made off Crum Elbow at 3:30 o'clock. On that day special trains will leave New York, from the West Shore Depot, foot of Franklin Street, at 11:20 a. m., and from the foot of Forty-second Street, at 11:35 a. m.

The observation train will be composed of fifty-one cars, each seating eighty people. Those who arrive on trains running into Poughkeepsie will find ferryboats ready to transport them across the Hudson to Highland, where they can take the observation train.

News Elections.

The following elections to the editorial board of the Yale News were announced on Monday, June 21st: 1899—Mason Tyler Adams of Amherst, Mass., Frederick Martin Davies of New York, N. Y.; 1900—Frederick Baldwin Adams of Toledo, Ohio, Preston Kumler of Evansville, Ind.
