Obituary.

JOHN W. WETHERELL, '44.

Colonel John W. Wetherell, of the Class of Forty-Four, died at his home in Worcester, Mass., on Saturday, Oct. 2, of Brights disease. He had suffered many years from this trouble and for three months before his death was unable to leave his bed. He leaves a widow.

Colonel Wetherell was born in Oxford, Mass., in 1820. His preparation for college was at Leicester Academy and he entered Yale at the age of twenty. After graduating from Yale in 1844 he studied in the Harvard Law School and was admitted to the Massachusetts bar in 1846. For nearly thirty years he practiced law in Worcester. When John Andrew, called the "war governor," was filling the executive chair in Massachusetts, he appointed Mr. Wetherell to his staff, with the rank of colonel. In this position he was of invaluable service to Governor Andrew in looking after the welfare of the state troops at the front and in the selection of officers.

CHARLES H. BULLARD, '47.

Rev. Charles H. Bullard died at his home at Hartford, Conn., on Oct. 16, after an illness that had continued since last December. Mr. Bullard was born in Uxbridge, Mass., February 13, 1820, and was the son of Luther and Hannah Dudley Bullard. He was graduated at Yale College in 1847, and after teach-

The Family's Point of View.

IF you are thirty-five years old and are in good health, and are earning $100 a month, your life, on which this earning depends, is worth $22,700 in cash to-day to your family. If you die they lose the $100 a month, the equivalent of which is the $22,700. The cash value of your life to them is therefore $22,700. They lose that if you die.

You have made your family dependent on you: dependent on that $100 a month. You have put them at the risk of losing it by losing you.

If you had a piece of property which was bringing you in $100 a month and it stood a chance of being destroyed and so cutting off your income, you would not rest until you had taken enough of that $100 a month and insured yourself against the loss of it. You would consider that you had not done your duty by yourself until you had so protected yourself effectually.

Your life is just such a piece of property to your family: you have made it so. They need just that same effectual protection against its loss which may come any day. And they cannot protect themselves. They rely on you for that as much as they do for the $100 a month itself. They need protection against that loss even more than you need protection against the loss of your property. But they cannot have it unless you give it to them.

You have exposed them to the loss: you have made them dependent on you: you alone can protect them in their dependence.

THE CONNECTICUT MUTUAL LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY

Makes its plans from the family's point of view: to give them the most absolute protection, at the least cost to you and with perfect equity to both. It will be glad to serve you and your family in this great matter.

J. Hammond Trumbull, '42.

(Henry Clay Trumbull in Sunday School Times.)

A little more than twenty years ago I was in my brother's house when he received a letter from George Bancroft, the historian, accompanying a set of the latest edition of "History of the United States." Mr. Bancroft said, in substance, that although he was aware that my brother had the earlier editions in his library, he wished to send him this later one also, for, as he had been indebted to him for important help in its writing at every stage, he felt that it was no more than right that he should send him each edition as it appeared, since he had had so much to do with its writing and with its revision. This might have led me to think that United States history was his peculiar line of research; but there were other facts that showed me how much he did in other spheres.

Not far from the same time there came a letter from Professor Asa Gray, the botanist of Harvard, saying that he had been invited by the British Association to read a paper on the indigenous flora of the United States, at its approaching meeting in Toronto.
