

ALUMNI NOTES.

[Graduates are invited to contribute to this column.]

'67—W. H. Morse, Class Secretary, was appointed to the position of Assistant in the Cataloguing Department of the Congressional Library, Washington, D. C., Sept. 1st. This appointment was obtained through the efforts of Senator George P. Wetmore, his classmate.

'81—The November number of The Printer and Bookmaker contains an article by Charles H. Cochrane on "The Men who make the Dictionaries," in the course of which he says: "Dr. Arthur E. Bostwick's work on books of reference began as associate editor with John D. Champlin, of the Young Folks' Cyclopædia. For some five years he has been assistant editor of the annual supplement to Appleton's Cyclopædia, contributing the articles on the progress of science. For three years he was associate editor of the Standard Dictionary. He was formerly a tutor in physics at Yale, was also an associate editor of The Forum, and now conducts the scientific department of The Literary Digest. He is an indefatigable worker, and keeps up to date in all the sciences. In addition, he has that rare good judgment and ability that is more properly called genius. His associates say that he writes all day and reads all night, and that if he had any spare time he would spend it hunting for something new to learn."

Obituary.

REV. W. W. ANDREWS, '31.

Rev. William Watson Andrews of Wethersfield, Conn., died on Sunday evening, at the age of eighty-seven. He was born in Cornwall, one of a family of four brothers and one sister, and graduated from Yale in 1831, in the class with President Porter.

In 1833 he was licensed to preach by the Litchfield North Association at Norfolk and immediately began his work, although he continued to teach the following Winter. He was first invited to preach at New Hartford and soon afterwards at Kent, and he was ordained May 21, 1834, by the North Consociation (Congregational) of Litchfield. He continued at Kent for fifteen years, then took a pastorate in St. Lawrence County, N. Y. Shortly afterwards he visited Canada and the British Islands preaching in many cities, his theme being the new light thrown upon the pathway in these last days and the restoration of the Apostles and prophets.

Mr. Andrews had lived in Wethersfield for the past 30 years, but did not pursue his work actively. He leaves a wife, two sons and two daughters.

HORACE BARNARD, '49.

Horace Barnard died at his home, No. 26 East 35th st., New York, on Monday, November 8th, 1897, aged sixty-seven years. He was born in Charleston, S. C., but when a child moved to Hartford, Conn. There he was prepared for Yale College. He

The Family's Point of View.

IF you are thirty-five years old and are in good health, and are earning $100 a month, your life, on which this earning depends, is worth $22,700 in cash to-day to your family. If you die they lose the $100 a month, the equivalent of which is the $22,700. The cash value of your life to them is therefore $22,700. They lose that if you die.

You have made your family dependent on you: dependent on that $100 a month. You have put them at the risk of losing it by losing you.

If you had a piece of property which was bringing you in $100 a month and it stood a chance of being destroyed and so cutting off your income, you would not rest until you had taken enough of that $100 a month and insured yourself against the loss of it. You would consider that you had not done your duty by yourself until you had so protected yourself effectually.

Your life is just such a piece of property to your family: you have made it so. They need just that same effectual protection against its loss which may come any day. And they cannot protect themselves. They rely on you for that as much as they do for the $100 a month itself. They need protection against that loss even more than you need protection against the loss of your property. But they cannot have it unless you give it to them.

You have exposed them to the loss: you have made them dependent on you: you alone can protect them in their dependence.

THE CONNECTICUT MUTUAL LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY

Makes its plans from the family's point of view: to give them the most absolute protection, at the least cost to you and with perfect equity to both. It will be glad to serve you and your family in this great matter.

studied law in Harvard, and in 1853 entered the law office of William M. Evarts. When the war broke out Mr. Barnard enlisted, and went to the front, but he was soon returned by the hospital authorities on account of chronic quinsy. Resuming the practice of the law, he became prominent through his activity in cases of bounty jumping. In later years he made a specialty of patent law. He had been an invalid since 1895.

Mr. Barnard was a member of the Manhattan Club; and although a democrat he was a member of the Union Club, having been admitted during the war. He was also a member of the Sons of the Revolution, his great grandfather, John Barnard, having been a captain in the Third Connecticut regiment.

Mr. Barnard was married, on the 30th of July, 1853, to Miss Louise A. Zarega. His wife and three children survive him. His son Horace had been for some years associated with him, as an attorney and counsellor at law.

IRA MOORE, '55 S.

Professor Ira Moore was found dead at his home in Cucamonga, Cal., October 30. He was born in Parsonfield, Me., in 1829, and was graduated from the Sheffield Scientific School in the Class of Fifty-Five. He was also a graduate of the Normal School of Massachusetts. In 1857 he organized the Illinois Normal School at Bloomington and was its vice-principal until 1861. In the same year he commanded a company of volunteers in the Thirty-third Illinois regiment, recruited for the war, from the students in his classes. In 1865 he organized the Normal School at St. Cloud, Minn.

A few years later he removed with his family to San Jose, Cal. In 1883 he accepted the principalship of the State Normal School at Los Angeles. He resigned in 1893 on account of failing health. He is survived by his wife, a son, and a daughter. The interment was at San Jose.

GEORGE LATHROP WRIGHT, '67.

The members of the Class of Sixty-Seven will be pained to learn of the death of George Lathrop Wright, which occurred at his brother's residence in Auburn, N. Y., on Sunday, the 7th inst.
