A MONUMENTAL TASK NEARLY ENDED.

THERE never has been in the history of book-making such an astonishing number of men of world-wide fame gathered together to do so notable a work as the preparation of Charles Dudley Warner's wonderful Library. The completion of this splendid undertaking will truly mark an epoch in the history of American letters.

It is remarkable that Mr. Warner has been able to everywhere secure the most famous writers, scholars, and thinkers, each to write upon that particular author or subject upon which he is recognized as the living master.

What an imposing array! There is Henry James, the novelist, Mr. Howell's friend and co-worker; Charles Eliot Norton, Harvard's great Dante scholar; Prof. Dowden, the eminent Shakespearean critic; Prof. Waldstein, of Cambridge University (England); Mr. Lecky, Prof. Mahaffy and Leslie Stephen, the three foremost living historians of England, and John B. McMaster, Carl Schurz, and Mr. Rhodes, who hold a similar position in this country; and then again a wide company of delightful interpreters of literature, with John Burroughs at their head.

From across the water comes an equally distinguished list, which includes Andrew Lang, Dr. Garnett, the late Dr. R. H. Hutton, the long-time editor of the "London Spectator," and Prof. Mackail of Oxford; Paul Bourget, M. Brunetiere, the editor of the "Revue des Deux Mondes;" Francisque Sarcey, the dramatic critic; and Edouard Rod, undoubtedly the four foremost living critics of France; and Prince Wolkonsky, the most notable of the younger school of Russian litterateurs.

There are such famous theologians as Archdeacon Farrar, of London, and Dr. Lyman Abbott and Canon Ainger, and great scholars like Prof. Royce, of Harvard; Prof. Evans, of Munich, Germany; Dr. Gildersleeve, of Johns Hopkins; and Ex-president Andrew D. White, now our ambassador to Germany.

It will be of interest to the many of our readers, who have been carefully following the progress of this monumental work, to know that its completion is near at hand. Twenty-eight of the volumes are now ready for delivery, and the entire Library will be in a few weeks. Then, as our readers are aware, the extremely low introductory price just now available through Harper's Weekly Club, for the purpose of acquainting the public with the high character and value of the Library, will be withdrawn. The price will be advanced on December 1st, and we feel that there are few who can afford not to investigate the present opportunity to secure this extraordinary work upon the easiest possible terms. A postal card addressed to the Harper's Weekly Club, at 93 Fifth Avenue, New York, will secure full particulars regarding the Library, and the exceptionally advantageous offer which, for the month of November only, the Club is able to make to those who become members.
