Yale Club Notes.

[Correspondence of YALE ALUMNI WEEKLY.]

New York, April 20, 1898.—The date for the April Club night of the Yale Club, which will also be the first annual meeting of the organization, has been announced as April 29. On account of the time which will be consumed at the meeting by the reading of reports and the election of officers, it has been decided to dispense with the usual paper or address. After the business meeting an informal supper will be given as usual.

The following nominations have been posted on the bulletin board by the Nominating Committee:

For the Council (to serve till April, 1901)—Henry Holt, '62; George C. Holt, '66; Philip G. Bartlett, '81; William P. Eno, '82; Richard M. Hurd, '88; Herbert Parsons, '90; Noah H. Swayne, 2d, '93.

For the Committee on Admissions (to serve till April, 1901)—Frank B. Wesson, '78; T. Halsted Myers, '81; William B. Goodwin, '86; James D. Layng, Jr., '95; Elisha E. Garrison, '97.

The April "Lit."

The first number of the Yale Literary Magazine issued by the Ninety-Nine Board appeared on Friday with the following contents:

Body articles—"In Via Media," by H. A. Callahan, '99; "Ballad of the Midnight Forest," by C. E. Merrill, Jr., '98. TenEyck Prize Essay—"Popular American Feeling Against England," by George Dana Graves, '99; "The Legend of El Cantara, The Singer," by Hulbert Taft, 1900; "The Chapel," poem, by W. S. Johnson, 1900; "John Halifax, the Boy," by A. B. Berger, 1901; "The Answer," poem, by H. A. Callahan, '99; "The Price That Was Paid," poem, by Huntington Mason, '99. Portfolio—"Robert Louis Stevenson," poem, by Kenneth Bruce, 1900; "Jean Rappa's Defeat," by P. H. Hayes, 1900; "A Matter of Identity," by R. Hooker, '99; "Two Fantasies of Gaspard of the Night," from the French of Louis Bertrand, by B. B. Moore, '99; "The Searchlight," by J. M. Hopkins, 1900; "Gremka," by J. W. Barney, 1900; "First Conversation: Across the Fence," by R. Hooker, '99. The usual departments—Notabilia, Memorabilia, Book Notices and Editor's Table, complete the number.

The Incident at Richmond.

A description of the friction on the field at Richmond between one of the Yale players and the umpire, suffered in description in the WEEKLY's account of the trip, through a slight error in editing the dispatches. Mr. Wadsworth's remark to the coach, which was made in a "jolly" way, was a question and not a statement. As he rattled on, he threw in the inquiry "Well, has he ever umpired before?" saying it, apparently for the same reason that most things are said by coaches, to wit, for the purpose of saying something. The coaches always welcome some new topic of exhortation and this seemed to have been Mr. Wadsworth's attitude towards the umpire.

Some people thought that Captain Greenway should have given in simply because it was college amateur baseball and it was better to concede than to scrap. He felt, however, that he was standing on a right which he must protect. As was said in the account, perfect good feeling prevailed between the two nines.

The May "Atlantic."

The Atlantic Monthly for May will contain a ballad from the pen of Henry Newbolt, the young English poet, who is the author of "Admirals All." The ballad is entitled "Gillespie." Another poem in this number will be by Mr. Stephen Phillips, entitled "After Rain." Two other poems, constituting a rather unusual group, will appear in the May number. One is by Mr. William Vaughn Moody of Chicago, entitled, "Good Friday Night," and the other by Miss Branch, called "A Song of the Wandering Dust." Ex-Secretary of State Olney writes on "The International Isolation of the United States," arguing for a more active participation in the affairs of the world. Dr. Benjamin A. Gould's work, in exploring and cataloging the southern stars and constellations, is set forth by Prof. T. J. J. See in his paper on "Great Explorers" of the Southern Heavens." The first of Librarian Spofford's "Washington Reminiscences" will appear in this number.

DON'T BE "UNPREPARED."

It was a venial offence, mayhap, in undergraduate days. It is not to be forgiven when the work of life has begun and the responsibilities and possibilities of the future sound back their warnings through the voice of simplest prudence. Be semper paratus.
