Yale, 8—Brown, 3.

Yale defeated Brown on Wednesday, April 29, in an interesting game, despite the fact that the weather was extremely unfavorable for fast work. The Yale batters hit well when hits were needed and Fearey again demonstrated his ability as a pitcher, by holding down Brown to five hits, striking out eight men and giving but one base on balls. Sullivan gave him good support, but he is still weak on covering the bases. The work of deSaulles and Hazen was below the mark, but the rest of the team played sharply. Wallace and Wear kept up their good batting records and Fearey made the longest hit of the day, a drive to deep center for three bases.

An unfortunate accident occurred in the sixth inning, which resulted in Patton's, Brown's first baseman, withdrawal from the game. He fumbled Lander's low throw and in attempting to regain the ball, collided with Sullivan, the runner, and broke his collar bone.

The score:

Table with columns AB, R, H, PO, A, E. Rows for YALE players: deSaulles, Wadsworth, Wear, Greenway, Wallace, Camp, Hazen, Fearey, Sullivan. Totals: 39 8 9 27 7 3.

Yale 1901, 12—Brown 1901, 3.

The Freshman team played the Brown Freshmen at Providence, Saturday and easily defeated them in a seven-inning contest. The Brown team showed up poorly in the field, while the work of the Yale Nine was uniformly good. The feature of the game was the playing of Gibson, who held the opposing players down to four hits and fielded his position brilliantly. The batting of the Yale team was good and their base running fair. The score by innings was as follows:

Table with columns 1-7 and totals for Yale and Brown.

Batteries—Yale, Gibson and Hirsh; Brown—Washburn and Chase.

Knight of the Burning Pestle.

The first public performance in New Haven, and probably in this country, of Beaumont and Fletcher's "The Knight of the Burning Pestle" was given in Warner Hall, Friday, April 29th. The audience was composed of members of the Faculty and their friends, and students in the Junior and Senior English courses. The play scored such a decided success that it must be considered one of the events of the college year.

As stated before in the WEEKLY, the play was given last term by members of one of Dr. Cook's classes, before the English Department. At general request the play was repeated in this public manner yet it was performed in its original, simple way. It is to be regretted that a second performance was not deemed practical, as it was found impossible to meet, in any adequate way the demand for tickets.

The last time that Yale students produced a play was in the Spring of 1895. While the joint plays were clever and amusing, the expense and the amount of time necessary to produce them, caused their discontinuance. The Dramatic spirit has now reappeared and in a much more satisfactory form.

The performance had a decided educational value. As a satire on the plays of the period and the Jacobean bourgeoisie, it is a study in the social conditions of the time and a valuable contribution to our knowledge of the stage. Judged simply on its merits as an acting play, the burlesque held the unflagging attention of the audience. The humor and wit were still fresh and unforced, and the actors could receive no greater compliment than the way in which the audience enjoyed their work.

The staging of the piece and the costumes were simple yet thoroughly adequate and reflected in a striking manner the Elizabethan spirit. The acting was decidedly above that of the average amateur performance, and this is all the more creditable considering the fact that there was no coaching done, each actor working up his own part and being responsible for his interpretation of the character. Without attempting a detailed criticism, Mr. Padelford as "Ralph" and Miss Myers as the "Citizen's Wife" deserve special praise. Miss Myers' acting was an exceptionally fine and intelligent piece of work, the humor of her part never for a moment being carried too far.

The play is one of the many signs of the deep interest the students are showing in the English work at Yale. The College is sadly in need of some stage where such performances can be given, yet even under the present circumstances this should become an annual event. Now that it has been proved that an old English drama can attract and interest a modern audience, there is no reason why other neglected works of the period should not be brought back to life. The warmest thanks of the University are due to the pioneers in this movement and Prof. Cook is to be congratulated on the showing of his class.

The cast was published in the WEEKLY of Mar. 31. Mr. Cooper being substituted for Mr. Whitman in the part of "Tim."

ALREADY A STRONG TRADITION

Yale is a place full of tradition. Traditions not only govern the conduct of Freshmen, the relation of classes and the status of institutions, but also the business dealings of the newcomer. They direct him where to go for the necessities and the luxuries of life.

Some of these traditions become strongly entrenched in a few years, and there is generally a very good reason for it. We think if you will communicate with our store by a personal call or by correspondence, you will see why the tradition has become so strong in a few years among Yale men to get their furnishings of Obituary.

JUDGE HENRY BOOTH, LL.D., '40.

Judge Henry Booth, formerly one of the best known jurists of Chicago, died at Minden, Nebraska, on Friday, April 29. For several years he had resided at Pasadena, Cal., and was on his way to Chicago, stopping about a week ago at Minden, to visit his daughter. Death resulted from a runaway accident.

Judge Booth was born in Roxbury, Conn., August 19, 1818. After graduation from Yale in 1840, he taught school one year in Wellsboro, Penn., studied law in Litchfield and New Haven, Conn., and commenced practice in Towanda, Bradford County, Penn., where he resided until the Spring of 1856. In that year he removed to Poughkeepsie, N. Y., and took charge of the Law Department of the State and National Law School. In June, 1858, he left this position and began the
