show a marked improvement in the next few days to keep their seats.

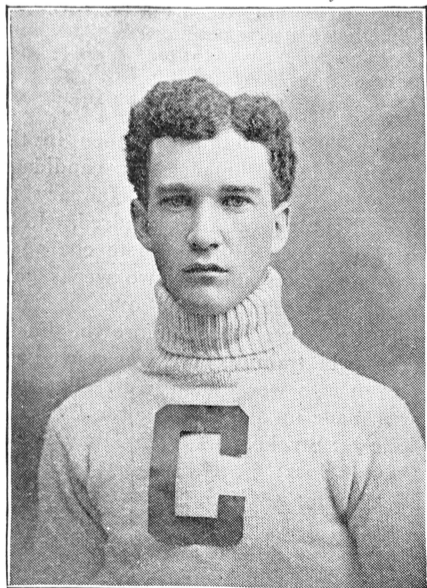

So many changes have been made all through the boat that Mr. Rodgers finds it impossible to get them together just yet. They are a strong lot of men, and ragged in many ways, but are travelling fast for short distances. The remaining five days are not too much to get them working smoothly.

F. D. COLSON, CAPTAIN CORNELL CREW.

The nominations for Vice-President were: R. P. Flint, '99 S., and J. C. Greenleaf, '99 S. Robert Philip Flint of Los Angeles, Cal., was elected. The following men from 1900 were nominated for Secretary: Malcolm Douglas, C. E. Brinley, and R. J. Schweppe. Richard Jewett Schweppe of St. Louis, Mo., was elected.

EQUIPMENTS FOR THE BATTERY.

Yale Men in the Platoon Delighted With Prospect of Good Tools.

Niantic, Conn., June 14.—The monotony of daily drilling with imperfect equipments was happily broken on Monday for the Yale platoon as well as for the others of Light Battery A, Connecticut Volunteers, now at Camp Haven, by the arrival of four new field pieces. The new guns are direct from the Watervliet Arsenal and have never been fired except for testing purposes. The length is about 7 feet or almost 2 feet more than that of the old pieces the Battery has used. The diameter is the same, 3⁷/₁₀ inches. Of course they are much more rapid in handling and more effective. The pieces were accompanied by the limbers and a quantity of ammunition. With the guns came other supplies from Washington, including unlined or Summer blouses, light underwear, shoes and socks and blue flannel shirts. The hot weather recently has made the wearing of heavy Winter clothing a considerable hardship.

The good beginning of the week was continued when, at noon on Tuesday, two large hampers were brought into Camp, addressed to the Yale platoon. They were filled to the top with broiled chickens, crackers, cake, doughnuts, fruit, and preserves. It is not unreasonable to believe that the monotony of camp food will be broken in the Battery for a day or so. The donors were Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Farrell of Ansonia. The engagement of a colored cook is rated one of the best investments possible, for by it the men are relieved of a work that few are qualified to fill. They not only are well fed themselves, but they contribute to the good of the rest of the Battery with the cook's delicacies, for which a reasonable charge is made, and the proceeds laid aside for extras. Excellent health prevails.

The Naval Battalion, First Division, Commander E. G. Buckland, in which are over thirty graduates and undergraduates, stayed but one week at Camp, having gone to Boston yesterday, where drilling will begin on the receiving ship Wabash. From that ship they will be detailed as needed to serve in the U. S. Navy.

The Prompt Action of the War Department.

Yale men at New Haven, who have been watching the fortunes of Light Battery A, with very deep interest, became convinced a few days ago that it was advisable to make a personal representation at Washington in regard to the conditions at Camp Haven. It was felt that the War Department would appreciate the situation as soon as the case should be taken up, and to that end a special request for early action was determined on. Col. N. G. Osborn, '80, consented to go to Washington in the matter. It goes without saying that Secretary Porter, '78, took up the matter with energy and success. Col. Pettit, formerly the army officer detailed at Yale, who is still in the Adjutant General's office, was also particularly zealous. The matter was at once given the most favorable consideration by Secretary Alger, Adjutant-General Corbin and the other officials of the War Department, who seemed most ready to do everything possible for the Battery. Before Col. Osborn left Washington orders had been issued for shipment of all articles necessary for perfect equipment, from four three-inch breech-loading guns to a paper of tacks. It meant about thirty thousand dollars worth of stuff in all. A good deal of it is already at Camp Haven. The members of the Connecticut delegation in Washington, in particular Senator Hawley and Congressman N. D. Sperry, took a lively and active interest in the Washington end of the matter.

Medical School Annual.

The Medical School Annual was put on sale last week. The editors are F. J. Parker and H. C. Rowland, both '98 M. S. Besides a frontispiece half-tone portrait of Professor Charles A. Lindsley, '52 M. S., there are individual pictures of the Class, and Faculty, and various views of the College buildings. There are the usual Class histories and articles of interest to members of the School.

Of the class of thirty-eight, six will take post graduate courses and twenty-two expect hospital appointments when their studies have been completed; seven expect to become surgeons, ten specialists, and the remainder general practitioners.
