

COACH ROBERT J. COOK, '76.

Sheffield Senior Class Book.

The Ninety-Eight Class Book of the Sheffield Scientific School, which appeared last week, is very similar to those of former years. The book is bound in blue cloth stamped with the Yale seal and the words "98 S., Yale, Class Book." The Class Book Committee consisted of E. T. Tefft, Chairman; F. V. Chappell, H. H. Porter, Jr., J. E. Ridgway, Jr. The book is dedicated to "Our Classmates who have enlisted." After the frontispiece, which is a picture of the Class in caps and gowns, come the names of the Class officers. Then follow the individual photographs and personal histories.

One of the features of the book is a group photograph, taken at Niantic, of the members of the Class who have enlisted in Battery C, First Connecticut Light Artillery. There are the usual number of athletic photographs and body articles.

The statistics are very interesting. Professor Corwin is voted the best teacher, the most difficult to recite to, the hardest to bluff, the most popular and the pleasantest; Professor Cross, the easiest to recite to; Professors Clark and Bishop a tie for the easiest to bluff; Professor Beach, the most rattling; Professor Clark the kindest and windiest; Professor Brewer the most broad-minded, and the most eccentric; and Professor Hastings the most polished, sarcastic, handsomest, brightest and neatest.

The average age of the Class on Commencement Day will be twenty-two years and eight days; height, five feet nine and one-fourth inches; weight, one hundred fifty-five and one-fourth pounds. As to the Class members themselves, Benjamin is acknowledged the hardest to rattle. Carpenter the weakest; Chauncey the nerviest; Cochran the most religious; Day the best natured; Drake the Class dude; Drummond the greatest fusser; Greenway the handsomest, most popular, most versatile, most prominent, most to be admired, and best athlete; Kelly the "grouchiest" and laziest; King the most "footless"; McLaren the wittiest and most original; F. M. Platt the greatest grind; Porter the most likely to succeed; Post the greatest "jollier"; Reynolds the Class doll; Ruggles the prettiest; Stone the vainest and greatest social light; Tefft the greatest bluffer; Watson the best dressed; Weston the heaviest smoker, and Worrall the brightest.
