

ALUMNI NOTES.

[Graduates are invited to contribute to this column.]

All Secretaries and others having information about Yale men, proper for record in the alumni note column, are urged to send it to us as promptly as possible. The records of the alumni in the vacation are a little more difficult to gather than at other times of the year, but it is absolutely necessary to keep this department up to date at all seasons of the year. Records are maintained the year round.

"English Etymology."

"English Etymology" (D. C. Heath & Co., Boston) is the joint work of Prof. Frederick Kluge of the University of Baden, and Prof. Frederick Lutz of Albion College, Mich. Designed to serve as an introduction to the study of the historical grammar of English, it forms an excellent reference book, and should attract students to this interesting subject of the development of the language. The words selected are those most frequently occurring in ordinary speech, and their history is briefly traced through middle and old English, and the various languages of Europe. The explanations are concise and scholarly, and the book is well adapted for even the advanced student of linguistics.

"The Essentials of Argumentation."

"The Essentials of Argumentation," by Professor Elias J. MacEwan (D. C. Heath & Co.), has been before the public for a few months, long enough to prove its peculiar value. It is not only excellently adapted to technical training, but is of interest to the general reader. As to its value in educational work, Professor Enoch Perrine of Bucknell University writes as follows: "It does well what no other book with which I am acquainted attempts: it presents not only the logical side of Argumentation—and they all do this more or less successfully—but it also presents in full the rhetorical side—and this is generally slighted. To make a good 'brief' is one thing, and to develop it well is quite another thing. To do this latter thing, Prof. MacEwan's book is the best help for both teacher and student now before the public. It is already in use with us."

The book has already attracted considerable notice as of great service in training men for the law and the ministry.

The "Yale Battery."

Light Battery A, First Artillery, Connecticut Volunteers, finished its recruiting here on July 1, and is now drilling hard at Niantic, with full ranks of 173 enlisted men. The high standard of the command has been well maintained in the new enlistments. One of the last Yale men to apply for enlistment was James F. Hooker, '95.

The equipment for the Battery is now well in hand and the organization is probably better favored in the way of guns, horses and other equipment than any other battery, except the Astor, outside of the Regular Army.

Lieutenant Weston, Yale '98, has been commanding the Battery the past week in the absence of Captain Honce, who has been ill at his home in Branford.

Private A. C. Ledyard, Yale '98, who was named by the President for a Second Lieutenantcy, successfully passed his examinations at New York last week and is now awaiting orders.

Harvard's Honorary Degrees.

From President Eliot's Presentation.

Masters of Arts—Nathaniel Paine, a Worcester local historian, biographer, bibliographer, botanist, zoologist and antiquarian.

Charles Lawrence Pierson, one of the earliest graduates of the Lawrence Scientific School, a resolute soldier in the Civil War; an upright man of affairs.

Hersey Bradford Goodwin, a judicious, high-minded and influential man of business and serviceable citizen, member of the much respected Railroad Commission of Massachusetts.

Doctors of Divinity—James De Normandie, wise pastor of the First Church of Roxbury and president of the trustees of the Roxbury Latin School, thus governing John Eliot's church and John Eliot's school.

William Reed Huntington, beloved rector of Grace Church in New York, an abundant fountain in a thirsty land, a fountain of charity, piety and solace.

Doctors of Law—James Mason Crafts, forty years ago a graduate of the Lawrence Scientific School and now President of the most successful school of applied science in the United States, the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Thomas Wentworth Higginson, a Bachelor of Arts in '41, a minister, a teacher, an early abolitionist in theory and in practice, Colonel of the First Regiment of South Carolina Colored Volunteers in the Civil War; a historian and a man of letters.

John Kendall Hamilton Gordon, the seventh Earl of Aberdeen, Governor General of Canada; he represents today the greatest English achievement except English liberty—a beneficent colonial policy.

Class Reports.

Mr. Wm. P. Bacon, Class Secretary of Fifty-Eight, has done a great service by preparing a treatise on Class Reports, which ought to help in making them in the future very much more valuable. He prints a list of 234 class reports in the Academical Department, including all the biographies of eight or more pages issued to 1898. He urges all Secretaries, before compiling a report, to carefully examine those that have been issued, and he urges them to exchange with all other secretaries. In regard to a class secretaryship he has this interesting paragraph:

"A class secretaryship is no sinecure, but one finds himself in good company when he recalls the names of Secretaries Day and Murdock of 1797, and of Fitch, Olmstead, Salisbury, Day, Kingsley, Thacher, Silliman and Hadley; of Presidents Dwight and Gilman, and of Newton and Wright. The value of these records I think is underestimated. Acceptable as they are to those for whom they are printed, they will also interest future biographers, since they often furnish personal contributions to the study of character and effort."
