OBITUARY.

J. H. PERRIN, '95.

J. H. Perrin, '95, died on June 15, at Boulder, Colorado, after a long and heroic struggle with an incurable disease. He left College in December, 1894, and went to Colorado. He has resided there most of the time since, making somewhat extended visits to Mexico and Switzerland. His brother, J. O. Perrin, '79, was with him at the last.

CHARLES MEIGS CHARNLEY, JR., '97.

Charles Meigs Charnley, Jr., died in his apartments in Los Angeles, Cal., on June 4th, 1898. He had been suffering for some time with chronic stomach trouble.

Mr. Charnley was the son of Charles M. Charnley of the Class of '65, and was born in Chicago, on May 16th, 1874. He had but recently come to California in the hope of receiving benefit from the change in climate, and was living with his younger brother in Los Angeles.

The Ninety-Seven and Ninety-Eight Nines.

Outside of the box the last two Nines which Yale has had have probably been the best collections of players she has ever put together. Failure to fill the pitcher's position cost the championship in 1897, although for general baseball quality the collection was hardly to be equalled. In 1895 the Yale Nine won two championships and made a total in both series of only twenty-one runs. In 1897, the Yale Nine lost both championships and made a total of forty-six runs. This year, a single man's arm was just saved from complete uselessness. By this very narrow margin and great pluck, Greenway was able to pitch at critical times and so the virtues of the Nine were made to count for something. As a whole, outside of this position, Greenway's men are rated as at least equal to any collection of baseball players Yale has had in former years. A very excellent authority, who has had much to do with their development, calls them on the whole the best set of Yale ball players he has ever met.

Please hurry to this office every scrap of war news about Yale men which comes your way. Put in every detail you can. Please send this news as fast as it comes to you. It is especially necessary to get it promptly.

Senior Supper at Savin Rock.

The annual Class supper of the Class was held at Savin Rock on Friday night. About ninety men attended, leaving the Green in special cars and returning about midnight. The supper was served at the Beach house.

Coach R. C. Lehmann sailed for England on June 25. He announced positively before leaving that he would not undertake to coach Harvard again, as he could not afford to give so much time on this side of the water.
