"My father was a drawing master before me. His exertions had made him highly successful in his profession, and his affectionate anxiety to provide for the future of those who were dependent upon his labors had impelled him from the time of his marriage to devote to the insuring of his life a much larger portion of his income than most men consider it necessary to set aside for that purpose. Thanks to his admirable prudence and self-denial, my mother and sisters were left after his death as independent of the world as they had been during his lifetime."

INTERCOLLEGIATE TENNIS.

Harvard by Superior Play, Retains the Cup—Poor Yale Showing.

The Seventeenth Annual Intercollegiate Tennis Tournament was held on the grounds of the New Haven Lawn Club during the past week. Play began on Tuesday, October 4th, and continued each successive day through Friday, October 7th, when the finals were played.

The preliminary round on the morning of the first day resulted in the defeat of Yale's three representatives.

Whitman of Harvard, the champion of the United States, beat Dodge of Yale 6-1, 6-4. The latter had not been playing all Summer and was easily out-classed by Whitman. Davis of Harvard defeated Hackett of Yale in a well played match, it requiring the three sets to decide the outcome. The score by sets was 4-6, 6-3, 6-4. Little of Princeton put Wagner of Cornell out in a rather easy fashion in a two-set match, the score by games being 6-3, 6-1.

In the first round Auchincloss of Cornell defeated Linen of Princeton, 7-5, 11-13, 6-3. Little of Princeton defeated Alexander of Princeton 6-3, 6-1; Ware of Harvard defeated Allen of Yale, 6-0, 6-4. It was expected that Allen would make a better showing than this, but as he had not played much in large tournaments, he was nervous and lacked judgment at times, but occasionally played brilliantly. It is thought that a few tournaments like this will give him experience and he will be a good man another year.

The surprise of the tournament occurred when Davis of Harvard defeated Whitman of Harvard, the National Champion, by the score of 2-6, 9-7, 6-0. Although Davis played splendid tennis, still Whitman was undoubtedly off his game and besides is not at his best on dirt courts.

Ware of Harvard also defeated Auchincloss of Cornell rather easily in a two-set match; the score was 8-6, 6-3, leaving two Harvard men to fight out the finals.

Ware won rather easily from Davis in a four-set match, the score by sets being 6-0, 6-1, 4-6, 6-4.

The new intercollegiate champion played by far the steadiest and most consistent tennis in the tournament and his drives and place shots were most accurate. Davis suffered from a sore foot, which handicapped him somewhat, so did not play the strong game he did the day before.

The doubles began on Thursday morning and in the first round Whitman and Ware of Harvard defeated Little and Alexander of Princeton, 6-1, 6-0. In the same round Hackett and Allen of Yale defeated Auchincloss and Wagner of Cornell rather easily in a two-set match, 6-4, 6-4.

In the semi-finals Whitman and

Ware of Harvard defeated Dodge and Noyes of Yale, 4-6, 6-3, 7-5. The next match in this round was a big surprise, because the Yale team, Hackett and Allen, defeated Ward and Davis of Harvard, who were looked upon as sure winners, since Ward was one of the pair, Sheldon an ex-Yale man being his partner, who won the National Tennis Championship at Newport. The score of this match by sets was, 6-0, 1-6, 6-4.

In the final round, Whitman and Ware of Harvard won from Hackett and Allen of Yale, by the score of 6-0, 6-3, 5-7, 6-2.

By winning both the singles and doubles Harvard keeps the cup this year and gets two points on the final total.

For a Miller Memorial.

A meeting of Ninety-Seven men was held in the office of the Law School Journal on Oct. 7th, to take action on the death of Theodore W. Miller, who died on July 8, from wounds received on the charge on San Juan Hill. At this meeting, over which Nathan A. Smyth presided, the plan of erecting some suitable memorial was discussed, such as a scholarship, bronze tablet, gateway, or stained glass window. Nothing definite, however, was decided upon. Charles H. Studinski and Knox Maddox were appointed to confer with Ninety-Seven men living in New York, and obtain their views.

A. F. Judd, Jr., C. P. Kitchel and H. H. Townshend, who were the committee appointed to draw up resolutions, have reported that it seemed more advisable to send a private letter to Mr. Miller's family, as the true feeling of the Class could not be expressed in formal resolutions.

Sidney B. Dean, 1900, has been elected Assistant Business Manager of the Yale Courant.

The annual University Class Tournament, confined to members of the Yale Chess Club, will probably commence on October 17. It will continue till the games are finished, and there are expected to be at least thirty competitors. The number of entries is now fourteen, and is rapidly increasing.
