

plan of holding college games on college grounds was adopted last year, and elaborate preparations have accordingly been necessary. Grand-stands with a seating capacity of 16,500 have been erected enclosing the field and the Pennsylvania Railroad has laid eight new side tracks, running directly to the gates, to facilitate the handling of the crowd. 2,500 seats in the middle of the west stand have been assigned to the Yale management for distribution among the graduates and undergraduates of the University. A special train accommodating about 400 students will leave New Haven on Saturday morning, running direct to Princeton via Harlem River. It will arrive shortly before the game and leave immediately after for New York, where stop-over privileges have been granted.

The Pennsylvania road will run special trains from New York, leaving the foot of Twenty-third street at 10.20 A. M. and 11.20 A. M., arriving in Princeton an hour and three-quarters later, respectively. Returning, they will leave immediately after the game. A special rate of $2 will be charged for round trip tickets (New York to Princeton and return), on these trains. The regular morning train leaving New Haven at 8.30 will allow sufficient time to connect with these trains.

The regular Pennsylvania trains, on which a fare of $2.40 will be charged for the round trip, will afford additional accommodations. They are scheduled to leave New York at 8.20, 9.20 and 10.50 A. M. and Princeton at 4.11, 5.08, 5.48 and 6.57 P. M.

Hard to Forecast.

It is difficult to recall a season in Yale's football history when the prospects of victory have been so clouded by the injuries and poor physical condition of the players as in 1898. The trouble began three weeks ago, when Dudley and Townshend were forced to retire from the Brown game because of injured knees, and when Corwin went to the Infirmary with a severe attack of tonsillitis. Benjamin was obliged to go to his home on the following Monday suffering from a severe cold and the next afternoon deSaulles left the field with a badly sprained ankle. A few days later Coy strained the tendons in his neck and Hubbell was so manifestly stale that several days rest was ordered.

Up to this time, in spite of the absence of coaches, the Eleven had been playing well together. The next week the coaches began to come, but found the Team in a demoralized state, owing to the absence and poor condition of these men. Some effective work was put in on the center of the line, but the development of team play was rendered impossible.

A LARGE SQUAD OF COACHES.

At various times last week the following graduate advisors were with the Eleven: Messrs. L. T. Bliss, '93 S.; S. B. Thorne, '96; C. Chadwick, '97; F. T. Murphy, '97; W. W. Hefflefinger, '91 S.; P. T. Stillman, '95 S.; F. W. Wallace, '89; W. T. Bull, '88 S.; and F. S. Butterworth, '95. General progress was impossible, however, owing to the continued disability of the players.

On Monday, W. C. Winter, '93 S.; Frank Hinkey, '95; and Vance C. McCormick, '93 S. were at the field in addition to Messrs. Bull, Thorne, Stillman and Bliss, who had returned to New Haven. deSaulles, Townshend, Dudley, Benjamin and Marvin appeared on the field in football clothes for the first time since they were laid off by injuries, but took part merely in the preliminary work. McBride was suffering from a twisted knee and Chamberlin from a bruised back, so they watched the work from the side lines. The striking feature of the afternoon was the substitution of Stillman for Allen at left tackle. The latter, though stronger and heavier, lacks Stillman's agility and aggressiveness, and has failed to improve under coaching. Stillman has been playing guard on the College side all Fall, and it is expected that he will develop rapidly from now on.

Messrs. Graves, Camp, Hefflefinger, Chadwick, Knapp and Butterworth joined the squad of coaches on Tuesday and for the first time this year the team lined up as it is expected to start in Saturday's game. After an hour's drill on the signals, the backs retired in order to preclude the possibility of further injury and a short, sharp practice game followed.

THE WEAK POINTS.

The weakest points on the Eleven promise to be on the ends. deSaulles, Dudley, McBride and Durston constitute a strong combination of backs, whose work should be equally effective on the defensive and offensive play, and with coöperation by the ends McBride's punting should be a prominent factor in Saturday's game.

Owing to the absence of several prominent members of the University squad, the WEEKLY has been unable to secure a satisfactory photograph of the Eleven for this issue.

Following are statistics of the players:

Final Preparations.

[Correspondence of YALE ALUMNI WEEKLY.]

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 7.—Although Princeton's showing in the last two games has not been good, most Princeton men believe that their team has a chance to win the game with Yale on Saturday. They base this belief on the well known strength of the line, which is constantly improving, and the hope that the backs will be in shape to handle cleanly and return McBride's punting. The men know that a hard piece of work is cut out for them and are working hard to do it successfully, under the coaching of Moffat, Lea, Balliet, Brown, Brokaw, Cooke and Kelly. It is safe to say the team that lines up against Yale will be a much stronger one than Princeton has had together before this season. The men from whom the final team will be chosen are the following: Booth, c.; Crowdis, Mills, l. g.; Edwards, Filson, r. g.; Geer, Pell, l. t.; Hillebrand, Beam, r. t.; Palmer, Crane, l. e.; Poe, Lathrope, Roper, r. e.; Hutchinson, Duncan, Rosengarten, Burke, q. b.; Beardsley, Feustermacher, l. h.; Black, G. Lathrope, r. h.; Ayres, Wheeler, Kafer, f. b.

The practice of the last week has been principally carried on in secret, the coaches working to strengthen the weak points disclosed in the West Point game.

The loss of Reiter, whose injury to his shoulder is very severe, is much felt, his absence materially weakening the back field. Beardsley and Knight as substitutes, however, are good, heady players.

The new men who may go into the Yale game are Beardsley, who prepared at St. Luke's; Hutchinson, from Mercersburg Academy; Mills, who played guard for two years on the Hill School Eleven; Pell, from the Brooklyn Polytechnic Institute and Roper from the Penn. Charter School.

Yale, 10—Chicago A. C., 0.

Yale's preliminary season closed on Saturday with the game against the Chicago Athletic Club Eleven at Yale Field. Yale won by the score of 10 to 0, but the result was far from satisfactory to those who have been following the work of the University Eleven this Fall. The regular line with the exception of one end and the two half-back positions were filled by substitutes. Yale's play throughout, both on the offensive and defensive, was decidedly erratic. At times the Chicago forwards opened up the line for big gains, and Yale lost the ball on downs or was forced to punt as a alternative, a number of times. The most discouraging weakness in Yale play lay in the inability of the ends to get down the field under McBride's low punts and stop the runner effectively, and in the ragged work in the back field. Almost every punt was followed by a return run of at least ten or fifteen yards by one of the Chicago players, while the Coach Appointed.—New Rule.

The Harvard Athletic Committee has chosen Mr. E. C. Storrow to be head coach of the University Crew for the coming year. At the same meeting the following very important rule was added to Harvard's eligibility rules: "No student who, by reason of probation or of deficiency in his studies, is debarred from playing on a University team, shall become eligible by transfer to another department of the University until after one academic year's residence in that department."

Yale backs on the contrary were decidedly weak in this department of the game. Yale's end plays were found ineffective early in the game and the offensive work was accordingly devoted almost entirely to line-bucking. The aggressive play of the Yale forwards in opening the Chicago line was one of the gratifying features of the game. Gilmor played brilliantly at half-back and McBride at full-back until they were forced to retire on account of injuries.

The Chicago Eleven was strong individually, especially in the line, and played unusually well together for an athletic club team. The ends were very fast, and Loomis, Slater and Wellington distinguished themselves in their work behind the line.

Yale scored twice, in the first half on a goal from the field by Sullivan and in the second on Harvey's touchdown, shortly before the call of time. Yale's play in the second half was characterized by greater snap than in the first, while Chicago, on the contrary, weakened perceptibly.
