Harvard and Yale Loyalty.

[From an Editorial in the Harvard Lampoon on the Rowing Situation.]

From the columns of the Crimson, all of us have been able to read the correspondence between the colleges. From the proposals of Captains Allen and Higginson, Yale and Harvard are eager to meet Cornell in rowing, and are willing to make her all concessions that will not do injustice to themselves or to other. From Captain Fisher's reply, Cornell is unwilling to meet Yale and Harvard on the terms proposed. As the situation now stands, Yale and Harvard, although holding open their offer to meet Cornell at New London up to the very day of the race, will row that race on the Thames, whether Cornell accepts that offer or not.

"In that situation Yale and Harvard will remain—of their right to do so there can be no question, or at least but

From one end of the land to the other, wherever men who demand the best are found, Fownes' Gloves are the recognized standard of merit and fashion. They are best for dress, for the street, for riding, driving, or golfing—for all occasions and all purposes. To wear them is to be correctly gloved. All leading haberdashers sell them.

one question which we feel called upon to answer. And that question is this: To whom does one owe more allegiance,—to an old and tried friend, or to a new, though worthy acquaintance? To this question there can be but one answer—the spirit of loyalty forbids any other. Yale has already made it—her papers have declared that her first wish is to row Harvard, her second to row on the Thames, her third to row Cornell. And her answer is ours. We will welcome Cornell at our old meeting-place, but with or without her, we will fight out the old friendly fight side by side with our old friendly foe, Yale, the true blue."

Yale Heads the Harvard List.

[Harvard Crimson.]

In the various departments of Harvard University, the colleges, normal schools, professional schools and universities represented by men who have received degrees at them before coming to Harvard, number in all 188. These 188 different schools and colleges have conferred degrees on 752 of the men now in the University. Graduates of Harvard College in the graduate and professional schools of the University are not included in the above statistics.

Yale University is represented by the largest number of graduates—77 in all. Brown is second with 49, and Amherst College is third with 37. Boston College has 25; Bowdoin College 23; Princeton University, 21, and Dartmouth, 21. From the University of Pennsylvania there are only 4. There are no graduates from the English universities of Oxford and Cambridge, but there are graduates from Heidelberg; University of Berlin; Urban College, Rome; University of Strassburg, Germany; Kaiser Wilhelm Gymnasium, Prussia; Acadia College, Nova Scotia; Victoria University, England; University of New Brunswick; Bombay University, and University of Havana. Of these 752 men, 204 are in the Law School, 216 in the Graduate School, 149 in the Medical School, 56 in the College, 27 in the Divinity School, 8 in the Lawrence Scientific School, 1 in the Dental School, and 1 in the Bussey Institution.
