YALE OBITUARY.

REV. LEVI WELLS HART, '46.

Rev. Levi Wells Hart, Yale '46, died of pneumonia at his home in Ramsey, N. J., on February 22, after a short illness.

Mr. Hart was born in New Britain, Conn., June 7, 1825, and after graduation studied Theology at Union Theological Seminary, and preached for a year or more in New York City. In 1850 he entered upon what proved to be his life work—the preparation of young men for college, taking charge of the College Grammar School in Brooklyn, N. Y.

This School he conducted till within a week of his death, when he had just begun his duties as Professor of Languages in the School of Commerce, connected with the Pratt Institute of Brooklyn. The large number of those who have received instruction from him, and are prominent in the business and educational circles of Brooklyn and vicinity, testify to the thoroughness of his methods and his devotion to his work.

In 1854 he married Georgiana, daughter of Wm. B. North of New Britain, who survives him. Brooklyn was their home till 1887, when they moved to Ramsey. In this place his intelligent and active interest in all matters pertaining to education, good citizenship and the religious life of the community, endeared him to all his townspeople.

DR. SIGISMOND WATERMAN, '48 M.S.

Dr. Sigismond Waterman, '48 M.S., died suddenly from heart trouble at his home in New York City, on March 15.

Dr. Waterman was born in Bruck, near Erlangen, Germany, where he received his early education. He came to this country in 1840, and soon after was appointed Instructor in German at Yale. While here, he began the study of Medicine, and was graduated from the Medical School in 1848 with honors. At the time of his death he was the oldest alumnus of that Department. After graduating he went to New York and began the practice of Medicine. In 1857 he was appointed Police Surgeon; an office which he held for thirty years and was then retired on a pension on account of age. In the war of the Rebellion, he was appointed Draft Surgeon by Governor Morgan, and he did good service during the riot of 1863. In 1868, Dr. Waterman introduced the study of spectroscopic analysis in the practice of Medicine and he has always been a specialist on this subject. He was appointed Professor of Venal Diseases in the Eclectic College, but retired on account of ill health. He joined the B'nai B'rith in 1850, and was at its head for three years as grand sar. He was one of the founders and for a time President of the Home for Aged and Infirm, at Yonkers, and belonged to various social, charitable, and medical societies.

Dr. Waterman's second wife, who was Miss Martha Simonson, a daughter and three sons survive him.

GUY ERNEST STEVENS, '95 S.

Guy Ernest Stevens, only son of the late S. M. and Sarah Stewart Stevens, and son-in-law of the Rev. Chas. C. McLean, D.D., died of typhoid fever on March 7, at his late residence, 1243 North 11th st., Philadelphia, Penn.

Mr. Stevens was born in Scranton, Penn. Oct. 23, 1874, and was in his twenty-fifth year. He pursued his course of study at Phillips' Academy, Andover, Mass, and was graduated in the Yale Scientific School in 1895, with first honors. For the past two years he was a medical student at the University of Pennsylvania. He was a member, from boyhood, of the Elm Park Methodist Episcopal Church of Scranton, Pa., where he met Miss Maud Manderson McLean (whose father was then pastor), and whom he afterwards married in Los Angeles, California, on January 20, 1896.

Rev. J. D. Fox and Rev. J. Walker Jackson, D.D., officiated at the funeral services in Philadelphia, and Rev. C. M. Giffin, D.D., and Rev. W. H. Pearce, D.D., at the services in Scranton, Pa., where his remains were taken for interment. Among the floral tributes from relatives, friends, and the Masonic order, was an exquisite emblem of an open book, from his Class, 1901, University of Pennsylvania.

Mr. Stevens was a young man of great promise and superior educational advantages, respected and admired for his manly, honest and upright character. He leaves a wife and two children in Philadelphia and a sister in Scranton, Pa.
