

YALE WINS FIRST GAME.

Baseball Nine Plays Well Against Wesleyan on Saturday.

The Yale Nine opened the season on Saturday, defeating Wesleyan at the Field by a score of 13 to 4. The weather was raw and cold and the diamond rather heavy as a result of the recent unfavorable weather. The work of the Yale Nine was highly gratifying, considering the few opportunities afforded recently for outdoor practice, the fielding being especially good. Gibson pitched the first four innings for Yale and did fairly well, and was succeeded by Whittlesey, whose record was not so good. Wesleyan's work in the field was extremely poor, and to this rather than to heavy batting may be attributed Yale's large score.

The score follows:

Cruiser Yale's Guns Are Here.

The two Vickers-Maxim rapid-fire guns, "Eli" and "Handsome Dan," carried by the Cruiser Yale, were delivered to the University on Saturday afternoon, March 25, without ceremony, no one having an inkling even of what the packages contained, which were unloaded in the vestibule of the Gymnasium.

Within a few days the guns will be assigned to some place in the Gymnasium, probably at the foot of the marble staircase, where they will be set up and fitted with their trappings as they stood on the deck of the Cruiser.

After Dinner Speaking.

This is rather the season for it in College, and the best banquets, at which it is heard, are more and more held at the New Haven House. There is a roominess and a good atmosphere about the hotel that commend it to undergraduates and to graduates.

"Gowf."

You can pronounce it that way or any other way that appeals to your discriminating sense of Orthoepy. The choice of pronunciation is a deliberate act for which there is plenty of time and a multitude of contradictory authorities to suit all preconceived prejudices.

But when it comes to the game itself, one is precipitated into a succession of mental and moral crises, when the judicial sense flees and the sensitive Caddy flees, and gentle people look the other way, and when one's state of mind makes it quite impossible to discriminate as to either the form or the substance of one's language. You can reduce the number and the intensity of these crises considerably by making the tools you work with the best that can be found. You can address A. G.
