

EASTER TRIP ENDED.

Brief Review of the Work of the Nine—Individual Work.

The Yale Nine returned to New Haven on Wednesday of last week from their annual Southern trip. Of the six games played, the Nine won from Manhattan College and Hampton and lost two games to both Georgetown and Virginia. A record of two victories and four defeats would, under ordinary circumstances, be a rather discouraging indication of the Nine's strength. However, as has been previously recorded in these columns, the preliminary practice was greatly hampered by bad weather and at the time of their departure, which was unusually early this year, the Nine was very much less advanced than usual at the time of the Easter trip.

In general the work in the field was fair, but a decided weakness was apparent in the batting and base-running. The pitchers all showed the effects of insufficient practice, though Robertson's work against Manhattan and in the last Georgetown game was very encouraging.

It will be of interest to know that the Princeton Nine last week met defeat in three of her four games played, two each, with Virginia and Georgetown.

In the six games, Yale made a total of 43 hits and 26 errors; their opponents, 46 hits and 33 errors. The records of Yale's individual players stood; deSaulles, 10 hits and 3 errors; Camp, 8 hits and 5 errors; Wear, 6 hits and 2 errors; Quinby, 5 hits and 1 error; Sullivan (five games), 4 hits and 4 errors; Wallace, 3 hits and 1 error; Wescott, 3 hits and 2 errors; Bronson (five games), 2 hits and 5 errors; Robertson (two games), 1 hit and no errors; Hirsh (three games), 1 hit and no errors; Brown (two games), no hits and 2 errors; Cook (one game), no hits and 1 error; Simonds, Gibson and Hall each played in one game and made no hits nor errors.

Yale, 4; Virginia, 10.

Yale was defeated by Virginia, Monday, April 3, in her second game with this college by the score of 10 to 4. Several temporary changes were made in the Yale team. Brown was substituted for Bronson at third and Hirsh for Sullivan behind the bat. Simonds occupied the box for Yale. His work was of an unfinished order, especially in allowing men to get a lead in stealing bases. Virginia took the lead from the very beginning by scoring five runs in the first inning. Yale fought hard to overcome this handicap, but was unable to bat up to their usual standard. The weather was fine, and the diamond was particularly fast.

Virginia went to the bat first. Wills and Martin were given their bases on balls and Curley singled. This filled the bases. Roe then drove out a long fly over center, scoring Wills and Curley, Martin was caught at the plate and Roe reached second. Two more singles by Steptoe and Wills brought Virginia's score up to the five. Curley then flew out to Wear with the bases full. In Yale's half of the first inning deSaulles singled. Quinby knocked a grounder to Curley, which resulted in a double play to Steptoe and Wills. Wear singled, but Wallace went out on a grounder to Pinkerton.

Virginia failed to score in the second inning, Martin being caught off first after making a single, and Roe and Steptoe each going out on grounders to Camp. Here Yale made a sharp recovery. Wescott was first on balls. He stole second and scored on Camp's single. Hirsh and Brown struck out. Simonds and deSaulles were allowed to walk to first, thus filling the bases. Quinby then flew out to Wills and Yale lost her best opportunity for scoring.

Virginia scored one run in the third, fourth, and seventh. Yale was unable to score again until the seventh, when singles by deSaulles and Quinby added two more runs to Yale's score. Another run was made in the eighth, due to Hunt's error on Camp's fly to left, scoring Wescott.

Virginia scored two in the ninth; Steptoe singled and Hunt put a fly over the left field fence.

Yale, 2; Georgetown, 4.

The last game of the Easter trip, though very closely and well contested, was lost to Georgetown University by the score of 4 to 2. It was the second game with this Nine. Yale showed great improvement over her playing on the first part of the trip. Robertson pitched for Yale and was very steady, allowing only two bases on called balls. Quinby played the last game for Yale. His catch of Downes' drive to center in the fifth inning, and his home run sending deSaulles in ahead of him, being the feature of the game. Neither team scored until the fourth, when Georgetown piled up three runs by a nice bunching of four singles. Yale made two runs in the sixth, and the game was anybody's until the last man was out.

Georgetown went first to the bat, going out in quick order. For Yale, deSaulles and Quinby struck out. Wear drove out a nice three-base hit. Wallace was allowed his base. It looked as if Yale would score, but Wescott went out on a fly to center.

Georgetown was unable to do anything in the second and third. Yale had two men left on bases in each of these innings, when a hit would have meant runs. In the fourth Georgetown took the lead by rolling up three runs as a result of singles by Downes, Walsh, Moran and McCarthy. Georgetown scored again in the sixth.

Yale did her only scoring in the sixth. With two men out deSaulles was allowed to walk to first. Quinby then made a nice drive to left-center for a home run. Neither team scored in the last three innings.

Yale, 3; New York, 7.

Yale was defeated by the New York team of the National League in New York on Saturday, April 8, by a score of 7 to 3. The Yale pitchers, Cook and Robertson, held down the opposing team to eight hits, but the work of the Nine in the field, at the bat and on the bases was decidedly erratic.

New York scored twice in the first inning and deSaulles' bunt followed by a stolen base and Quinby's hit netted a run for Yale. In the second inning New York made another run, but in the third, Yale tied the score on hits by Quinby, Wallace and Camp, and Warner's error.

The score remained 3 to 3 until the sixth inning, when New York took the lead, the final score standing 7 to 3. The work of Wallace and Quinby at the bat was the feature of Yale's play.
