YALE OBITUARIES.

COLONEL WILLIAM WINTHROP, '51.

Colonel William Winthrop, '51, of the Regular Army, died suddenly at Atlantic City, N. J., Saturday, April 8.

Colonel Winthrop was born in 1832, being a lineal descendant of John Winthrop, the first Governor of Massachusetts Bay Colony, and was graduated from the Academic Department in 1851. After studying Law at the Yale and Harvard Law Schools, he was admitted to the bar, and, in 1855, began to practice in Boston, afterwards removing to New York City, where in April, 1861, he enlisted as a private in the Seventh New York Regiment, rising gradually by meritorious services to the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel of Volunteers. In 1867 he was transferred to the regular army as Major and Judge Advocate, where his ability almost immediately won him a promotion to the position of Deputy Judge Advocate with rank of Lieutenant-Colonel. He was then detailed to duty in California as Judge Advocate of the Division of the Pacific, where he remained until his appointment in 1886, to a professorship of Law at the United States Military Academy at West Point, N. Y. At about this time, General Swain was court-martialed, and it was through arguments and precedents furnished by Colonel Winthrop that a mitigation of the sentence was brought about.

Colonel Winthrop has written many works on military law, the best known of which being his great work on "Military Law and Precedents." Aside from his professional work, he was a skilled linguist, and a botanist of some repute. He has frequently of late been a contributor in prose and verse to many leading periodicals and scientific reviews.

He was married to Miss Alice Worthington, like himself a member of an old colonial family.

REV. JAMES BRAND, '66.

Rev. James Brand, a graduate of Yale in the Class of Sixty-Six, died suddenly, of apoplexy, April 11, at Oberlin, Ohio, where, for many years he had been the clergyman of the First Congregational Church.

Mr. Brand was born at Three Rivers, Quebec, in 1834. His parents were Scotch, and emigrated to this country shortly before his birth. When a boy he worked on a farm, and afterwards learned the carpenter's trade, and worked at that occupation till he was 24 years old. He then determined to have a college education, and entered Phillips Academy at Andover in 1858, and Yale, in 1861, in the Class of 1865. When the war broke out, he left College and enlisted in the 27th Connecticut Regiment, in which he was color bearer. He was in the battles of Chancellorsville, Fredericksburg, and Gettysburg. He was wounded at Fredericksburg, and received a gold medal for distinguished bravery at Gettysburg.

After the expiration of his term of enlistment he entered the Class of 1866 in Sophomore year. He was one of the leading men in that Class and was Class Poet at graduation. He entered the Andover Theological Seminary, and was graduated there in 1869. In October, 1869, he became pastor of the Maple Street Church at Danvers, Mass., and remained there till 1873, leaving there to become pastor of the First Church at Oberlin, Ohio, where he subsequently remained till his death. This is the church attended by most of the students at Oberlin College, and he was practically the College preacher during his life at Oberlin.

In 1883 he received the degree of D.D. from Iowa College. He was a delegate to the International Council of Congregational churches at London in 1891, where he read a paper on "Sacerdotalism and Modern Unbelief," which received very high praise. He was a forcible and effective writer, lecturer and speaker, and a man of a peculiarly poetic and noble nature. His College poetry was of an unusually high order. His old College friends remember him with admiration and affection, and have heard of his death with grief. The lines of his valedictory poem arise in their memory as they bid him farewell:

We part; but these strong ties shall not dissolve.
'Tis but the false that time can overthrow.
Each true emotion, every genuine chord
That quivers in the breath of this young life,
Shall rise above all partings and abide.
G. C. H.

Owing to continued ill health, Professor Jules Luquiens, Professor of the Romance Languages in the University, will discontinue his work for the remainder of the present college year. During his absence Mr. Taylor will take charge of his classes.

"Gowf."

You can pronounce it that way or any other way that appeals to your discriminating sense of Orthoepy. The choice of pronunciation is a deliberate act for which there is plenty of time and a multitude of contradictory authorities to suit all preconceived prejudices.

But when it comes to the game itself, one is precipitated into a succession of mental and moral crises, when the judicial sense flees and the sensitive Caddy flees, and gentle people look the other way, and when one's state of mind makes it quite impossible to discriminate as to either the form or the substance of one's language. You can reduce the number and the intensity of these crises considerably by making the tools you work with the best that can be found. You can address A. G. Spalding & Bros., at either New York or Chicago.
