Dennis of New York the rare distinction of the honorary fellowship of the college. The fellowship of the College of Surgeons, one of the, if not the, highest surgical distinctions of Great Britain, has for many years past been obtainable only after a most rigid examination, though formerly it was an honor conferred by election upon selected members, as the fellowship of the College of Physicians still is. When the change was made, however, the right was reserved of granting two honorary fellowships annually honoris causa, upon selected members of the college of twenty years' standing. This is, we understand, the first time that the honorary fellowship has been conferred upon an American surgeon, though there are many such who are members of the college. Mr. Thomas Frederick Chavasse, a prominent and brilliant surgeon of Birmingham, England, is the other recipient of the honor."
