Yale, 10; Columbia, 6.

Yale won a well-contested game from Columbia at Yale Field on Wednesday of last week, by the score of 10 to 6. Gibson, who pitched for Yale, was effective, except in the fifth and eighth innings, when the visitors succeeded in bunching their hits. Yale batted heavily, especially in the seventh inning, when five hits were made, including two home runs. Both teams fielded well, although Columbia's work was considerably slower than that of the University Nine.

Yale, 10; Brown, 1.

The second and last game in the baseball series with Brown, played at Providence on Saturday, resulted in another easy victory for the University Nine, the score standing 10 to 1. Robertson pitched a most effective game for Yale, allowing but four hits and one base on balls and striking out six men. He was in general well supported at critical times although the Yale Nine made a number of errors. Brown's misplays, on the contrary, were very costly, and Washburn was hit heavily by the Yale batsmen throughout the game.
