The regiment left on half an hour's notice for Camp Thomas, Chickamauga Park, where the Ninth Regiment went into camp. This camp became very unhealthy owing to the prevalence of typhoid fever, nearly one-third of Company G being on the sick list; two of the men died. The regiment was moved about a mile and remained there in camp until Aug. 29, and then moved to Camp Hamilton, Lexington, Ky., remaining there from Sept. 1 to Sept. 17. Then moved to regimental rendezvous at Wilkes Barre and from there proceeded to Reading, where the company was furloughed Sept. 21, for thirty days. After the expiration of the furlough the company was mustered out. The company took part in the Peace Jubilee at Philadelphia.

The company was raised by Captain Green in and about Reading, and was the first company from Pennsylvania enlisted under the second call. They made ready for the field in less than thirty days, the Captain having the valuable assistance of First Sergeant Joseph A. Baer of the Junior Class at West Point as instructor. For about two weeks in August, the regiment was under waiting orders to take part in the Porto Rican campaign. They once received orders to pack up and proceed to point of embarkation, but the order was revoked.
