

Corbin's Corner.

THE POPULARITY OF FLANNELS has led us to stock up with samples of flannels of every conceivable pattern. You can see our stock just as well if you are a thousand miles away from New Haven. Drop a line and we will forward any number of patterns. If you are not already supplied with flannel suit or flannel trousers the chances are that you will want them before the summer is a third over. But that is only a suggestion.

PRESIDENT-ELECT'S STAND.

irresponsible statements concerning drunkenness at Yale, which can be disproved by anyone who takes the trouble to examine the records of the New Haven police. Whether the indirect influence of such charges will tend to keep some students away from Yale, I do not know; nor do I think we should greatly trouble ourselves about the matter. I like to fall back on the words of Arnold of Rugby: "It is not our chief concern whether this should be a college of one hundred and fifty boys, or of three hundred boys; but that it should be a college of Christian gentlemen."

An Undergraduate View.

[Editorial in Yale Daily News.]

Looked at from the standpoint of the undergraduates no more popular election could have been announced than that of Professor Arthur Twining Hadley. Last night's demonstration was one proof of this statement. He is a man who has gained great prominence in his department, and who has already done much for Yale. He will now enter up a larger and broader field of work. He has a precedent before him in the work of President Dwight that will be hard to live up to; yet we believe that he will prove equal to assuming the many burdens and meeting successfully the many problems that will have to be faced. He and his father before him have striven indefatigably in the service of the University, and Professor Hadley holds a very warm place in the hearts of all Yale men. His talk to the students last night at his house went to the hearts of the undergraduates. He could not have made a better beginning. We do but voice the sentiment of greater Yale, old and young alike, when we say—may all success attend the new administration; may it work to the glory and good of our University.

A Quarter Century Ahead.

[New York Evening Post.]

By a process of natural selection, Prof. Arthur T. Hadley has come to the top among the men of his period of life and of his type. His age and health hold out every promise that, at forty-three, he may look forward to an administration of a quarter of a century. He has had twenty years' experience as tutor, lecturer, and professor. He has won recognition, both in this country and abroad, in his specialty of political economy; but he is no narrow specialist. His knowledge and his interests are so wide that he can take a broad view of the whole range of learning in a great modern university. He combines with the scholar's tastes much of the equipment for a successful man of affairs. He supplements his other qualifications with that most valuable of all, the ability to interest young men in serious work, while at the same time he recognizes the necessity of recreation and the advantages to be gained from athletics wisely managed. Finally, he understands that the highest obligation laid upon the educated man is to serve the republic, and that the best tribute which can be paid to an educational institution is the fact that its graduates are good citizens.

Not only is Yale University to be congratulated upon what we believe to have been the best possible solution of a grave problem, but the cause of education throughout the United States. It is a great thing to have a man of this type set in so high a place, as an example alike of the dignity of the scholar's life and of the usefulness open to the trained educator as a force in the development of the nation.

Points About the Presidency.

While the inauguration does not take place until next October, President-elect Hadley will begin his work immediately after Commencement.

The fixing of the president's salary at $6,500 was one of the acts of the last regular meeting of the Corporation. It was not announced with the other news of that meeting.

Think It Over

In 1896, after my return from London, in a little book published on Dress, I called attention to flannels which were worn by Englishmen at the Henley regatta. I predicted their popularity in this country.

A Short Sermon.

A very advanced Dominie at Hasbrouck Heights, N. J., conceived the idea of a novel Sunday evening service; so he prepared his sermon—a short one—and several hymns and scripture readings the day before on a number of cylinders, and he actually held the meeting, "as advertised." The affair created quite a sensation at the time, quite a sensation indeed. Inside of a month the Rev. Mr. Dominie was preaching in a church out West,—preaching, mind you,—no more phonograph for him. Well, it simply proves the truths of saying, "Everything in its proper place."
