

Commencement News.

A Commencement extra of the News will be published this year June 28, and will contain in addition to the usual matter, several new features of interest. The leading article will be a complete account of the Yale-Harvard baseball game, with statistics and cuts of both teams and a full review of the season's work. There will also be half-tones of each of the four captains of the Yale teams for the present year, and for next year as far as possible.

President Dwight's term of office will be reviewed and there will be an article on President-elect Hadley, with cuts of both men. Also, an article on the new Law School building.

The program of the Commencement exercises will appear, including the Baccalaureate sermon, the Senior class oration and poem, and the program for the class reunions. Announcement of the various prizes of the University will be made and the Corporation meeting will be reported. There will also be articles on "What Ninety-Nine has done for Yale" and, "Undergraduate work in Ninety-Nine Sheff."

A boat race extra will also appear immediately after the finish of the race on the 20th. This will contain, besides many other articles of interest, a complete review of the season's work of the crews; group pictures and statistics of the men and a separate picture of Captain Allen. Both papers will contain ten pages and the price of each will be ten cents.

Baccalaureates.

Rev. Samuel N. Crothers of Cambridge delivered the baccalaureate sermon before the Senior class of Harvard, Sunday, June 18, in Appleton Chapel. He said in part: "As you reach the end of your college course, the question comes, what does it all amount to? The question has come before, but in the little world of the college it has been possible to evade it. What are you worth? Has your education fitted or unfitted you for the work which you must do? For we must frankly admit that education does sometimes unfit a man for common life without raising him to the plane of the uncommon. The requirements of this working world are simple. They are the qualities inherent in the conception of manliness. In all sorts of social service the unit is the man power, as the horse power in mechanics. Certain human powers can be substituted for by machinery and books, but there are others that are exclusively human. Further, the kind of human power that is necessary to any worthy achievements is moral power, which guides and rules the world. There are no substitutes for common sense, patience, integrity, courage. But it is the function of education to transform a narrow and intolerant virtue into one that is broad and intelligent. Conscience must always rule. We have a right to demand of the educated man that he shall bring to the discussion of the complex questions of modern civilization, a mind so disciplined as to bring order out of chaos. Modern life makes larger demands upon the individual and requires a more strenuous training; but this training is merely the bringing to the fullest perfection the manly qualities of truthfulness, courage, steadfastness and loyalty."

Rev. Dr. Henry Hopkins of Kansas City, Mo., a graduate of Williams College in the Class of Fifty-Eight, addressed the Class of Ninety-Nine of Williams College in the Congregational Church of Williamstown, Sunday, June 18. At the close of his baccalaureate sermon, he said: "You stand upon the threshold of the twentieth century. Believe in the new age, in the better day. Be hospitable to new thoughts, to new truths. Be alert to use scientific methods and quick to utilize the best gifts to civilization. Do not be afraid of the logic of Christian love as applied to the industrial and commercial situation."

The annual baccalaureate sermon of Tufts College was preached by President Elmer H. Capen. His subject was "The Compulsion of Beneficence a Law in the Higher Life."

Rev. Charles O. Day, Yale '72, delivered the baccalaureate sermon at Phillips-Andover Academy, Andover, Mass., Sunday, June 18. His subject was "The Battle of Life."

The friends of the YALE ALUMNI WEEKLY are urged to send in Summer news of themselves and other graduates for insertion in the Commencement and mid-Summer numbers.
