THE RAGLAN

As you know, this is named from the English General, Lord Raglan. He wore that kind of a coat, but it has been developed since his first wearing of it. It is specially noticeable by the cut of the shoulders.

Raglans will be worn a great deal this Winter in both ulster and overcoat. Rough cloth is used.

PROGRESS IN FOOTBALL.

Yale, 28; Bates, 0.

Yale's third game of the season on the home grounds was played Saturday, Oct. 7, with the Bates College (Maine) eleven, resulting in a score of 28 to 0 in her favor. For the first ten minutes of play, the Maine boys gave as pretty an exhibition of line breaking as any one could wish to see. It was ill-timed and fruitless, however, for before they got at all dangerous, or had even reached Yale's territory, they had beaten themselves out and were soon thrown back to defeat. The game was much the hardest of the season, and while it told severely on Bates it showed Yale to be in splendid condition.

Sharpe, Adams, Stillman, Francis, and Captain McBride, who was playing his first game of the year, made most of the gains in the first half, while Kiefer in the second showed he had not forgotten to run, by making a couple of end dashes of 25 yards or so, and took advantage of several fumbles of the opponents very cleverly. Cunha played a good game at center, but was not as aggressive as the coaches wished. Fincke handled the ball cleanly on the defensive and ran the team with fine judgment. Sharpe's work in punting was of the most encouraging sort, every one of his kicks having good distance and almost perfect direction. He was tried at goal kicking from the touchdown for the first time, and, though he missed two comparatively easy ones, the other three went straight as an arrow. Thomas and Schweppe played their end positions well.

When Yale kicked off at ten minutes past three, Purinton, the Bates captain, got the ball on his ten yard line and returned it a few yards. On the first line-up Bates used the old tackles back play for a gain of five clean yards through Francis, and a minute later for six more in the same place. Then they tried the left wing, where Olcott was playing instead of F. G. Brown, and found a hole for half a dozen more yards and repeated the trick. Through first one side and then the other the heavy and fast backs of Bates were shot with monotonous regularity, until the Yale team had been pushed back nearly to the 50-yard line. Here Yale braced under the urgings of Captain McBride, and when she took the ball on downs, began a furious charge down to her opponent's goal, sweeping aside the Bates line like paper. It took one minute and twenty seconds to cover those fifty yards, and there were just five line-ups in that time. Adams had the ball when it crossed the line.

The ice having thus been broken, another touchdown was made in a couple of minutes, McBride, Leary and Stillman carrying the ball straight down the field from the 40-yard line in four plays. Before the half ended two more touchdowns had been made, one by Sharpe and one by Francis. In the second half after another touchdown had been added, McBride retired in favor of Dupee and thereafter the football of both elevens was decidedly poor, the ball hanging near the middle of the field, changing hands every other minute on account of fumbles. The attendance was less than 600.
