HARVARD WINS TENNIS.

Hackett and Allen Beaten in Intercollegiate Tournament.

Harvard's representatives in the nineteenth annual tournament of the Intercollegiate Tennis Association, held on the New Haven Lawn Club courts on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of last week, returned to Cambridge with victories to their credit in both the single and double matches.

The number of entries was somewhat smaller than usual owing to the absence of the Cornell representative, but the play was up to the usual high standard of these intercollegiate tournaments, as a number of men of national repute in tennis circles were included among the competitors. The weather conditions throughout were ideal and the more important matches attracted liberal numbers of interested spectators.

INTEREST IN THE DOUBLES.

The progress of the doubles was followed with special interest, as Holcomb Ward and D. H. Davis of Harvard, and H. H. Hackett, 1900 and J. A. Allen, 1900 S., of Yale, the winners of the Eastern and Western doubles respectively during the past season and whose match at Newport resulted in a victory for the Harvard men, were numbered among the five pairs entered. In the early rounds, Ward and Davis defeated H. A. Plummer, Yale 1903, and C. F. Childs, Yale 1901 S., 6-3, 6-1; and the Princeton pair, R. D. Little and Frederick Alexander, 7-5, 6-3; Hackett and Allen in turn disposed of E. R. Marvin and Thomas of Harvard, 4-6, 6-4, 6-1. The finals were played on Thursday morning, when the Yale men made a somewhat firmer stand against the national champions than at Newport, but again suffered defeat in four sets, 6-2, 6-3, 4-6, 6-4. The Harvard representatives were more steady at critical times and their fierce service and clever lobbing were effective against Hackett's strong smashes and Allen's ground strokes.

The finals in the singles Thursday afternoon brought together as opponents Harvard's victorious double pair. Davis was in fine form and won without difficulty in straight sets, 6-3, 7-5, 7-5. Ward used his accurate lob and short cut strokes with considerable effect, but Davis' smashes were invincible.

THE BEST MATCH OF THE MEETING.

The Hackett-Ward match in the second round afforded the most exciting tennis of the tournament. After losing the first set, 6-3, Hackett pulled out the second 7-5, working up from 2-4. The deciding set, however, was Ward's, 6-4. The Harvard man's play was steady and aggressive while Hackett on the contrary was decidedly erratic, spoiling the advantage of his brilliant placing by frequent wild drives.

Allen's work against Davis in the semi-finals was thoroughly disappointing, as he only succeeded in winning one game out of the two sets.

A complete record of the tournament follows: Singles—Preliminary round, H. H. Hackett (Y.) defeated J. Ogden (P.), 8-6, 6-2. First round, J. A. Allen (Y.) defeated E. R. Marvin (H.), 2-6, 6-4, 6-3; D. H. Davis (H.) defeated F. Alexander (P.), 6-3, 6-0; H. Ward (H.) defeated H. H. Hackett (Y.), 6-3, 5-7, 6-4; R. D. Little (P.) defeated H. A. Plummer (Y.), 6-3, 6-1. Semi-final round, Davis defeated Allen, 6-0, 6-1; Ward defeated Little, 6-4, 2-6, 6-1. Finals, Davis defeated Ward, 6-3, 7-5, 7-5.

Doubles—Preliminary round, H. Ward and D. H. Davis (H.) defeated H. A. Plummer and C. F. Childs (H.), 6-3, 6-1. Semi-final round, H. H. Hackett and J. A. Allen (Y.) defeated E. R. Marvin and Thomas (H.), 4-6, 6-4, 6-1; Ward and Davis defeated R. D. Little and F. Alexander (P.), 7-5, 6-3. Finals, Ward and Davis defeated Hackett and Allen, 6-2, 6-3, 4-6, 6-4.
