HARVARD WINS AT GOLF.

3 up, although Myers started out at terrific pace. After halving the first hole, Myers scored a remarkable 2 at the second and won, and also won the third. A half at the fourth and another at the fifth left him 2 up, but Dahlgren took three out of the next four, thereby securing the lead, which he maintained throughout the match. He finished 3 up.

This gave Princeton the victory by 11 holes to 7, or 6 points to 4.

Summary:

PRINCETON.	Holes.	YALE.	Holes.
Griswold	4	Robertson	0
Stuart	2	Cheney	0
Pyne	2	Hitchcock	0
Kellogg	0	Havemeyer	4
Cook	0	Byers	3
Dahlgren	3	Myers	0
Total	11	Total	7

The strong Harvard team had a very easy time with Columbia, not a single member of the latter team winning. Harvard won by 29 holes or 14 points.

HARVARD WINS MATCH HANDILY.

On Wednesday the deciding team match for the championship was played between Harvard and Princeton, and the former team won handily by the score of 21 holes to 2, or 9 points to 1. The result was at no time in doubt, as at the close of the morning play the score was 10 to 1 in Harvard's favor. The most sensational match of the entire tournament was brought out by the afternoon's play. Griswold, Princeton, led Hubbard, Harvard, by 3 holes at the close of the morning play, but in the afternoon Hubbard not only broke down his lead, but finished 2 up on his Princeton opponent.

BETTER WORK BY YALE.

With the beginning of the play for the individual championship on Thursday, matters assumed a little brighter aspect for Yale, as three of her representatives qualified. They were: E. M. Byers, 1901; T. M. Robertson, 1901, and Charles Hitchcock, Jr., 1903, who had the lowest score, 80, of the qualifying round. The scores of the eight who qualified for the championship at match play were: Charles Hitchcock, Jr., Yale, 80; J. A. Edwards, Columbia, 81; J. G. Averill, Harvard, 82; G. G. Hubbard, Harvard, 82; John Stuart, Princeton, 82; T. M. Robertson, Yale, 86; E. M. Byers, Yale, 86; Percy Pyne, 2d, Princeton, 86.

The second round was played off on Friday morning, and at its completion Charles Hitchcock, Jr., 1903, was the only Yale man left in the contest. J. G. Averill, Harvard, in defeating his opponent, G. G. Hubbard, Harvard, 6 up and 4 to play, did the course in 79 strokes, a record breaker.

John Stuart, Princeton, defeated T. M. Robertson, Yale 1901, 6 up and 5 to play. Stuart's game in the outward course was very fine and when he turned home he was 4 up. The best Robertson could do was to halve the tenth and eleventh and Stuart took the next two and the match.

Charles Hitchcock, Jr., 1903, and E. M. Byers, 1901, both of Yale were the next pair and the Freshman won by 4 up and 3 to play.

Percy Pyne, Princeton, and J. A. Edwards, Columbia, went out respectively in 38 and 40, when the former was 2 up. After that Pyne had the better of a close match and won out 4 up and 2 to play.

The semi-final round, which brought out the most exciting match of the entire tourney, was finished in the afternoon. Stuart, Princeton, went down rather easily, by the score 5 up and 4 to play, before Averill's, Harvard, fine golf. The former made the out holes in 37, a pace that put Stuart, although he scored 41, down by 4 holes.

HITCHCOCK PUT OUT OF THE RACE.

Charles Hitchcock, Jr., Yale 1903, and Percy Pyne had a match that was full of exciting incidents from the first hole, where the latter laid his cleek shot within safe holing distance and won 3 to 4. The three was a stroke under par. The second was halved and then Pyne evened the score with a 4 to 5. After halving the fourth in 6 they were both on the fifth green on their seconds, but Pyne holed his two-foot put and took the hole 3 to 5. The next two were halved in 4s, Pyne took the eighth and the ninth was also halved. At the turn Pyne was 2 up. Pyne secured the next hole, but the match was squared on the eleventh green, Hitchcock making a par 4, while Pyne, who had sliced his drive into the rough, needed 6. The twelfth was won by the Yale man and the long hole was halved in 6 after Pyne had made a remarkable recovery from the rough with a cleek shot. The sixteenth green saw the match all even. From an apparent half Pyne pulled out the seventeenth by downing a forty-foot put and taking the hole 5 to 6. On the eighteenth green it again looked as if the Yale man would tie the score, for he lay his opponent a dead stymie. But Pyne was equal to the occasion and lifting the ball he pitched it over nicely with his mashie and ran it down for a half in 3. He was 1 up.

The finals between Percy Pyne, Jr., Princeton, and J. G. Averill, Harvard, were played on Saturday and resulted in the latter's defeat by 1 up. Although it took thirty-seven holes to decide the contest, neither man played the golf of which he was capable. Pyne took the thirty-seventh and deciding hole 4 to 5 by superior putting.
