The Ninety-Eight Dinner.

[From a Special Correspondent.]

A typical '98 "game" was held at the Yale Club last Saturday night. The game was disguised as the annual class dinner and the following were the majority shareholders: Male, Ray, Curran, Reeve, Cowdry, Loewi, Paxton, Lockman, A. R. Baldwin, Kennedy, H. B. Clark, Recknagel, Merrill, Gallaudet, Garrison, D. E. Peck, Leeds Johnson, Blumenthal, Glaenger, Turnbull, Benjamin, Grenville Parker, Kernochan, Fitch, Dominick, Bridge, Booth, Shall, Gehrman, Crane, Ely, T. M. Smith, H. P. Wilson, Sawyer, David Rogers, Scheftel and Milliken.

Frank Simmons managed the dinner and ran the "game," and no one could have done it better. The oratory of the evening began with a few bursts of words from Ashbel Fitch. "My fellow citizens," said Fitch, hastily getting up, "I rise to my feet with great reluctance—a purely mental act." Then he described Borden's wedding in a few harrowing statements and sat down amid great applause. Merrill was then called on and responded with an alliterative class alphabet in rhyme. A letter from Marsh, representing the Ninety-Eight men at the Harvard Law School, was then read. It began with the following poetical eruption:

To the legions of the shiftless. To the cohorts of the ———
To our brethren in their law schools over seas,
Sing the loafers up in Cambridge, always tired, never crammed,
And students of old Harvard if you please.
Yea! students of old Harvard, tho' we're on a tack to starboard,
Oh we've gone the pace and still are going blind,
Our lessons we don't know, to lectures seldom go
So Baldwin's acting somewhat less than kind.

CHORUS.

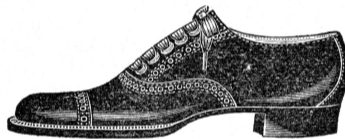

We're poor little stiffs who loaf all day,
Baa-baa-baa
We're little black sheep as bad as Gay,
Baa-baa-baa-
Shiftless law students out on a spree
Cursed by Pop and faculty:
Heaven have mercy on such as we
Baa-baa-baa.

Curran was then called on to speak on "Journalism as Opposed to Tribunism." He began with the following logical gem, "Once in a while three years ago." The remainder of his remarks bore out this brilliant beginning. He was followed by winged words from Hudson perpetrated by D. E. Peck. Peck had just completed a scientific feat which will go echoing down the corridors of time, in discovering Lockman, the human glyptodon, buried 6,000 feet in a bed of auriferous gravel. He told the crowd about it and then sat down. Turnbull was next called on to discourse on the
