Ninety S.

To the Members of '90 S.:

Our Decennial Reunion will be held at New Haven, on Tuesday, June 26th. The committee urge you to make an especial effort to be present at this time.

The price of the dinner and incidental expenses, exclusive of wines, will be $5. Arrangements will be made to attend the ball game in a body, probably in the same section with or next to Ninety, Academic.

The committee wish to publish a Class record as complete as possible. They therefore ask every member of the Class whether they intend to come to the reunion or not to send $2.00 to H. B. Cheney, South Manchester, Conn. They do not think it right that this expense should be borne only by those who make the effort to come to the reunion, though they hope that everyone will be there.

We call your attention to the notice of the Class Secretary and ask that every man without fail answer the questions which are necessary to compile the record. If any member of the Class has not received one of the blanks, please send address to H. B. Cheney, who would also be glad to receive any information about members or ex-members of the Class from any source. H. G. Day, 153 Church St., New Haven, will also be glad to receive or give any information.

YALE OBITUARIES.

WILLIAM A. BALDWIN, '50.

The Class Secretary, Rev. A. Booth, reports that William A. Baldwin, '50, died in New York City June, 1899. Mr. Baldwin was born in Killingworth, Conn., Feb. 23, 1824.

He studied at Yale and Bangor seminaries and preached at Peru, Ill., Morris, Ill., Whitewater, Wis., and Fond du Lac, Wis., but on account of a change in his religious views he studied law from 1860 to 1862 and was admitted to the bar in May, 1862, in Wisconsin. The next year on account of ill health he came East and subsequently practised law in Philadelphia and New York.

Mr. Baldwin was twice married and left a widow with two sons. By a former marriage he had four daughters and one son. In 1896 he had a paralytic stroke from which he suffered the last years of his life both mentally and physically.

WILLIAM CARRINGTON MAYO, '52.

William C. Mayo, a translator in the United States Department of State, died after two weeks' illness at Washington, D. C., on April 12th.

He was the son of Edward C. Mayo (Yale, 1811), his mother being a sister of Gen. Winfield Scott. He was born at Richmond, Va., Jan. 8, 1834, and, after preparation at Burlington, N. J., entered the Class of Fifty-Two at the beginning of Junior year. For two years after graduation he was a Civil Engineer on railroad surveys in Pennsylvania, Ohio and Virginia, and then spent two years traveling in Europe, visiting the Holy Land. In 1857 he went to the coast of Africa, as captain's clerk on the U. S. Sloop of War Dale; he resigned in the following year, and revisited Europe for a long stay. The outbreak of the Civil War found him at Paris, laid up with a broken leg, and owing to an unskillful surgeon it was six months before he was able to travel. He then crossed to England, thence came to Nassau, and finally succeeded in running the blockade into Charleston.

He joined the army of Northern Virginia as a private, and took part in the battle of Chancellorsville, Gettysburg, the Wilderness and Spottsylvania, being shot through the body in the latter battle. After recovery he rejoined his regiment and was at the battle of Hatcher's Run, and the closing scenes of the war. He was paroled at Appomattox, having risen to be Orderly Sergeant of Company G, 12th Virginia Infantry, Mahone's Brigade. He was wounded six times during the war.
