WEEK IN BASEBALL.

Cook Back on the Squad—Review of Some of the Work.

The event of the week in baseball was the appearance of C. P. Cook, 1901 S., with the squad. Cook pitched and played in the outfield last year, but this year, owing to a condition, has not been permitted to play, until now. His added strength makes the chances of the Nine much brighter than before, besides being a heavy batter and a fast and sure outfielder, he is a pitcher with unusual speed and wide curves. Last year he was wild in the box, but under the coaching of Nichols has developed into a steady man, as shown in the Andover game, where he struck out a number of men, and gave only three hits and two bases on balls.

In his endeavor to turn out a strong batting outfield, Captain Camp tried G. B. Ward, 1902, who has been batting heavily on the College Nine, in center field. In the Andover game Ward did not live up to expectations, however, at the bat and did not inspire confidence in his fielding. Guernsey, who has been very weak at the bat, has jumped rapidly to the front in that department and is likely to hold his place for that reason. Cook has taken Barnwell's place at center since he came on the Nine, and may supplant him entirely, although Barnwell is about as good a fielder. Barnwell's weakness is in batting. Unless some very hard hitter comes forward, Sullivan will probably remain in right field with Cunha behind the bat. As a backstop, Cunha equals Sullivan and as a thrower to bases is much better. But as a coach and helper for the pitchers and a general steadier of the team he is far behind Sullivan.

There has been no change in the infield, which now seems to be settled, barring accidents, and is as fast as any in recent years. Sharpe continues to improve at first and in the last two games Quinby redeemed his rather indifferent work of the three previous games. Camp, though not at his top form in batting, is playing a very fine fielding game.

The Brown game, although resulting in a defeat, gave the Nine valuable experience, and Nichols, who saw both the Andover and Brown games, had an opportunity to do some coaching. Yale's fifteen hits in nine innings, off Washburn, is very encouraging. The best that Princeton and Harvard could do with the Brown pitcher, in their games recently, were three and five hits respectively.

Yale 9; Andover 0.

Yale shut Andover out in a well-played game at Andover, Friday afternoon, and scored 6 runs. Cook, 1901

S., who has just gone on the team, was in the box for Yale and allowed but three hits off his delivery. He gave only two bases on balls. Yale did not score until the sixth inning, through the remarkable pitching of Stevens. In the sixth, however, after hitting Sullivan, Stevens weakened, and Yale bunching her hits, scored five runs before the inning was over. Guernsey led at the bat, making two singles and a double. Sharpe and Cunha each made two singles, and on the whole, the batting was an improvement over the recent games played by the Nine. The fielding was very clean, Barnwell taking three difficult chances without errors. Sullivan, Quinby and Camp covered their territory faultlessly. No Andover man got past second base and only three reached that point.

Yale 6; Brown 7.

Yale lost a long drawn out and stubbornly contested fourteen-inning game to Brown at Providence, Saturday, May 12, by the score of 7 to 6. In the eighth inning, Brown, who had made four runs, was headed, through a good batting streak, when six consecutive hits were made, resulting in five runs. Brown tied in her half of the inning, and after that it was a pitchers' battle for six innings, Brown finally winning by Clark's sensational home-run drive in the fourteenth inning. Robertson pitched a wonderful game, and but for the unfortunate errors of himself and his teammates at critical moments, would have brought Yale a victory. The batting of the Nine was better than has been seen before this season, fifteen hits being made off Washburn, who allowed but five in the first match at Yale Field. Captain Camp had a bad day, both at the bat and in the field. Guernsey's error, coupled with Cunha's wild throw to first, was a large factor in the loss of the game. Quinby, at second, played a perfect fielding game and Cook covered a wide territory in center. The latter's batting was also a feature of the game.

Yale 1903 18; Hotchkiss 7.

The Hotchkiss School Nine did not show its usual strength in the game with the Yale Freshmen, Thursday, May 10, at Lakeville, and the latter won by a score of 18 to 7. The Freshmen were very ragged in their fielding, making in all twelve errors. Thompson, at short stop, had four of these.
