Ninety-One Decennial.

The vote recently held to decide the time of the Decennial Reunion has resulted in the choice, by a large majority, of June, 1901, rather than of October, the time of the Bi-centennial celebration of Yale.

HIPPOLYTE GRUENER,
Secretary.

Ninety-Four S. Reunion.

The reunion of Ninety-Four Sheff. promises to be the largest of any class yet returning. The committee have assurance at this writing that eighty-one men will be present to uphold the reputation of the Class and hope that this number will be considerably increased before the procession starts. They especially urge every man who has not advised them of his intention to be present, to do so at once, that arrangements may be made for them, and should there be any one who has not received Sexennial notice, such fact should be made known at once.

The business meeting takes place June 26, at 10 A. M., in North Sheffield Hall. The Class will meet at Osborn Hall at 1.00 P. M. and, headed by the Second Regiment band and their drum and bugle corps, will march to the Field, where seats have been secured for the Class in a body. On arrival at the Field a Sexennial photograph will be taken by Phelps. A selection especially appropriate to this Class will be played as they make their appearance on the Field.

After the game the order will be as follows: Down Chapel to College, stopping at ex-President Dwight's in order to pay our respects to the President of our day; continuing our way to President Hadley's, that we may indulge in our first greeting as a class to the new President; thence proceeding to Prof. Brush's and Prof. Chittenden's, after which we wend our way down Orange Street to Chapel to Warner Hall, where the Class Dinner will be served, and the Class Cup presented, following which the usual illumination and festivities will take place.

YALE OBITUARIES.

HON. O. S. NEWELL, EX-'61.

Hon. O. S. Newell, ex-'61, died at his home in Kenosha, Wisconsin, April 17. He was a member of the Class of Sixty-One for the first two years of the course, but was obliged to leave on account of illness. For several years he was Mayor of Kenosha, but retired early from public life, although he continued to wield his influence indirectly throughout his prolonged illness.

HON. ALBERT FRANCIS JUDD, '62.

Hon. Albert Francis Judd, '62, died at his home in Honolulu, on the 20th of May, 1900.

Mr. Judd was the son of Dr. and Mrs. Gerrit P. Judd, who went to Honolulu under the auspices of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, on the ship Partheon, arriving there March 30th, 1828. He was born in Honolulu, January 7th, 1838.

His early education, carried on under the difficulties that surrounded the education of the children of the first missionaries, was received at the Royal School, then a school for the education of the chiefs and their children. He completed his preparation for College at Oahu College, Honolulu, and entered the Junior class at Yale in 1860, taking his Bachelor's degree with the Class of Sixty-Two. The Master's degree was given him by Yale in 1865, and the degree of LL.D. was conferred upon him in 1894. While in College Mr. Judd was a member of Alpha Delta Phi and Phi Beta Kappa.

His legal education was obtained at the Harvard Law School, from which he was graduated in 1864. He returned at once to Honolulu and began the practice of law.

His political career commenced with his appointment as Attorney-General under King Lunalilo in 1873. He held that office during the reign of Lunalilo and on his death resumed the practice of his profession. On February 18th, 1874, he was appointed Second Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the Hawaiian Kingdom, to succeed A. S. Hartwell, Harvard '58, who entered the Royal Cabinet. Mr. Judd became First Associate Justice three years later on February 1st, 1877, and on the death of Chief Justice Harris became Chief Justice on November 5th, 1881. When he went on the bench during the stormy period that marked the beginning of Kalakaua's reign, Honolulu was practically occupied by a foreign naval force, landed to preserve order and to protect the property of foreigners from the riots growing out of the contest for the throne between Kalakaua and Queen Emma. Chief Justice Judd's decisions in the many important cases arising from this bitter contest, though hotly assailed when rendered, have stood the test of time. Following the overthrow of the monarchy in 1893, there were a number of other cases of great importance, having a political origin, which he was called upon to decide. With annexation and the transfer of the sovereignty to the United States came another series of important cases, which came before the Supreme Court. The principles of Chief Justice Judd's decision that the constitution of the United States was not extended to the Hawaiian Islands by the mere force of the annexation resolution have been the principles recently approved by Congress and the Administration. His career on the bench extended over at least four periods of critical importance in Hawaiian history.

In the Fall of last year Chief Justice Judd's failing health led him to seek rest and recuperation in Central New York. An attack of the grip in February, when at Lakewood, New Jersey, accelerated his decline, and he returned home in April last.

Mr. Judd married Miss Agnes H. Boyd of Geneva, New York on April 4th, 1872. His widow and nine children survive him. They are: Agnes E., Albert F., Jr., James R., Allen W., Henry P., Charles S., Sophie B., Gerrit P., and Lawrence M. C. Judd. The three eldest sons have been at Yale, and the fourth is a member of the present Junior class.

The late Chief Justice has written his name indelibly on the history of Hawaii as an able jurist, as his father did as an able administrative officer. He, as his father had done before him, served the monarchy, but he served it as an honorable American gentleman could. Hawaii was the land of his birth, but the United States was the land of his ancestry and education. He rejoiced to see Hawaii taken under the wing of the great republic, for he knew that political and commercial safety lay that way, but he loved Hawaii for herself, and he loved her native people, and was anxious to do all in his power for them by advice and example. Thoroughly acquainted, as he was, with the Hawaiian mind, thought and traditions, he occupied a peculiar position of influence and affection among the Hawaiian people. As President of the Hawaiian Board of Missions he strove to fight the demoralizing influences at work among the natives.

His private life was the admiration of all who knew him familiarly. A more devoted husband and father could not be found, nor a truer friend when once he had given his friendship. His public character was able, industrious and patriotic; it commanded respect from those who were not in accord with him; it won the esteem of those who were.

The funeral was held at his late residence on Huanu Avenue, Honolulu, on May 21st. While the last rites were simple, the six sons at home acting as pall bearers, yet a throng of people attended, including government officials, and men and women of all nationalities, to offer the last tributes of affection.

California Alumni Association.

At the regular annual meeting of the California Yale Alumni Association, held in San Francisco, May 22, 1900, Prof. E. B. Clapp, '86 Ph.D., of Berkeley, was elected President, and Knox Maddox, '97, was elected Secretary for the ensuing year. The other officers are: Vice-President, William Mayo Newhall, '76; Treasurer, Nathan W. Wilson, '94; Executive Committee, Frank L. Owen, '80, and Willard N. Drown, '96.

The regular annual dinner, usually held in the Fall, was omitted last year and instead a Yale dinner was given Judge Taft. It was held at the California Hotel, on the night of Friday, April the 13th, and was the most successful dinner the Association has yet given. There were present about sixty Yale men and a number of guests. Samuel Knight, '87, the then President of the Association, acted as toastmaster, and the toasts were responded to in the following order: Judge Taft, '78; President Benjamin Ide Wheeler, of the University of California; Knox Maddox, '97; Judge J. M. Seawell, Harvard; Prof. Thomas R. Bacon, '72; Prof. E. B. Clapp, '86; and General W. H. L. Barnes. During the evening the Bohemian Club quartette, led by Henry H. Haight, '88, sang Yale songs.

PITY ABOUT BASEBALL

Everybody used to play it and amateur baseball is as much good sport as any game on the foot-stool. But first it was tennis that took people away and then it was golf.

But the college nines keep it up and the preparatory schools and the next month shows the glory of it. In this, as in every other branch of sport, the name on all supplies is that of
