

Law School Journal Elections.

At a meeting of the Editorial Board of the Yale Law School Journal held Thursday evening, Cornelius B. Kitchell, Yale '97 and 1901 L.S., was chosen Managing Editor for next year and W. H. Jackson, 1901 L.S., was chosen Business Manager.

This is the first election of officers which has occurred under the new system. Formerly these positions were given to the men submitting the best essays for the Law School Journal Medal. This is now changed, as the medal is no longer offered and instead of essay, case work has been made the basis of competition for the Board. Under this method fifteen men were chosen by the Faculty from the Junior class to whom further competition for the election was allowed. The contest was based on digest work and comments of recently reported cases. The managing editor and business manager were both chosen from the Middle class.
